THE RACES.

Five Events on To-Day's Programme.

Betting at the Pool Rooms—Track Gossip—Monday's Races—The Weather.

Bancroft Wins the First Race in 2:40.

The sixth day of race week presents a programme equally as attractive as any yet given. In some features it is stronger and more likely to attract attention. Yesterday's list read well enough and most of the events proved highly attractive, but the drawing card was a disappointment. The big event of the day was to be the run for the Brewers' Cup, 2¼ miles. It was known that "old Check" would win, but at the same time here was great interest felt to see just what kind of a race Bancroft, Bootjack and Blazes could give him. When the cup race was called it was found that nobody but John Davis was left to keep Checkmate company, and the interest accordingly dropped very low. John Davis, however, made a splendid run, and forced Checkmate to rush under the wire in 4:01, which was just 4¼ seconds slower than the best time on record, that made by Springbok and Preakness in the dead-heat at Saratoga, July 29, 1875.

In the second race Lizzie McWhirter, who was sure to win, was defeated handsomely and easily by Milt Young's Glenarm, and the people who invested on the mare—and they were very numerous—lost heavily as a result. The other events were highly interesting.

To-day's programme includes five races, all of them first class in every particular. The first race—mile and one-half, for all ages—brings out, among others, Bancroft, Pope Leo, Metropolis, Lida Stanhope, and a field of flyers. In the pools this morning Bancroft was a wild favorite and nobody would give anything against him. It was rumored that he might be drawn, but at 1 o'clock this was not true, and he is very likely to run. He is not in the best condition, and although the odds are very heavy on him, there is a possibility that one of the strong field against him may get first to the wire.

In the Southern Hotel stakes Tom Plunkett is a big favorite, his defeat of Bootjack on Wednesday making him a first choice with everybody.

The steeplechase, which was so successful on Wednesday, will be repeated to-day. Savannah, the winner of the steeplechase, is the favorite, but she will meet two new horses to-day, and it is certain that she will have to run much faster than before to take the stake. In all details to-day's five races are very interesting, and will draw a very large audience. Monday will be the last regular day, but there will be extra races Tuesday, certainly, and probably on Wednesday, although the details are not yet arranged for the latter day.

Pools This Morning.

Pools sold this morning at the Southern Hotel as follows:

First Race—No pools were sold, it being conceded that Bancroft will walk off with the purse.

Second Race—Plunkett, $55; Gilmore, $31; Glenarm, $20; Katie Creel, 13; Gunnar, $20; Ranger $14; Mistral, $13, Fosteral, $11; field, $5.

Third Race—Amazon, $110; Mattie Rapture, $60; Bagdad, $45; field, $25.

Fourth Race—Force. $1 50; Blazes, $40; Allegretto, $30; Brigand Belle, $26; field, $20.

Fifth Race—Steeplechase—Guy, $25; Burnet, $10, Sunanoa, $15.

At the Track.

W. Cottrill's ch. g. Harry Gilmore; by imp. Buckden, dam by Wagner.

B. G. Thomas' b. c. Gunnar, by Alarm-War Reel.

Pools sold: Plunkett $200; Harry Gilmore $70; Mistral $30; Glenarm $30; Kattie Creel $25; Gunnar $35; Ranger $25; field $25.

Gilmore won the race; Mistral second; Tom Plunkett third. Time, 2:40.

Third Race.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RACE TRACK, June 10.—The third race was a selling race, for all ages; purse $250; horses entered to be sold for $1,000, to carry full weights; for $750, allowed 5 pounds; for $500, 10 pounds; for $300, 14 pounds; winner to be sold after the race, and one-half the surplus given to the second horse, balance to the association; heats of three-quarters of a mile.

Wm. Mulhey's b. g. Flanders, age 4 years, by Huntington-Inverary (114 pounds).

W. Coon's b. g. Bell-Boy, age 6 years, by Longfellow-Belinight (108 pounds).

Dr. J. N. Grive's s. g. Billy G., formerly Billy Ward, 4 years old, by Brigand-Anna Travis (100 pounds.)

Applegate & Bros.' b. m. Mattie Rapture, 4 years, by Rapture-Lizzie, Bellfield (102 pounds).

Hayden & Barry's ch. g. Bagdad, age 4, by Ventilator-Queen of Hearts (114 pounds).

Jas. G. Williams' b. g. Amazon, 5 years, by Asteroid-Miss Morgan (114 pounds).

Bell-Boy took the lead and won the first heat in 1:46½.

In the second heat Bell-Boy took the lead and kept it to the three quarter pole, when Rapture passed him and won by a neck in violent rain. Time, 1:16½.

Monday's Programme.

The programme for Monday will consist of six races.

First Race—Grand spin of three-quarters of a mile, for all ages. Purse, $250, of which $50 to second.

Second Race—The citizens' plate and handicap sweepstakes, for all ages, of $50 each; h. f., $1,200 added, of which $300 to second, $100 to third; one mile and three-quarters. Closed with 64 entries.

Third Race—Selling race; purse $350, of which $50 to second; mile heats.

Fourth Race—Consolation purse, $250; for horses that have run and not won during this meeting; one mile and a furlong.

Fifth Race—Gentlemen's steeplechase; for cup. This will be one of the most interesting events of the meeting. There will be about six entries.

Track Talk.

W. R. Donaldson and Capt. Thorwegan never miss a day.

Six races are already arranged for Tuesday, the first extra day.

Milton H. Wash left the School Board for an hour or two to look on at the flyers.

The Misses Mamie Hargadine and Cherry Bent rode out on horse-back yesterday, with gentlemen escorts.

Mr. John M. Glover, escorting Miss Cora Baker, occupied a prominent position in the central stand yesterday.

In alighting from the Tally-ho yesterday one of the young ladies fell half the way and was stunned for a moment, but soon recovered.

Mr. John Mulford can get more curious music out of the Tally-ho "bugle" than any man who has yet ridden on top that vehicle.

"Judge" Bacon of the O. & M. Railroad was anchored to a fifty cent ticket, and sighed for the vanity of human things when Vis-a-Vis was left.

Geo. Bain had his boutonniere with him and complained of a contraction of the muscle of the right eye, after he had watched Cathcart.

Rev. D. S. Phelan, who is an ardent admirer of horseflesh, and who was wont to be a regular attendant at the races, is unaccountably absent this year.

Judge Chester H. Krum has read all the decisions on pool-selling as published in the reports, and he sticks so close to Cathcart that he is supposed to be Bob's legal adviser.

Col. Chas. L. Hunt was almost sunstruck yesterday, so lengthy an audience did he hold with his boy on the track relative to the way Davis should be ridden against Checkmate.

Bancroft can trot a mile in three minutes without skip or break. He has been in bad condition all this season, and at one time this spring was on sale at $700 with no purchasers.

Col. J. C. Normile says that the penalty for betting with Mr. J. B. McCullagh of the Globe-Democrat, and winning from him, is to have funny squibs written about you in that paper.

John Finn was the victim of the practical jokers again yesterday. Somebody "tipped" him that the best move would be to buy Checkmate for a place in the brewers' cup race, and after letting several of his friends into the secret he went out to the corner, and came back very mad because he could not buy such a ticket.

The members of the West End Club state that they have been misrepresented. They made no use of the hired "whip" all the way out on Tuesday, but the boys had such a good time at the track that their nerves were not steady enough for the strain of the drive home, so they simply laid back and locked at the scenery.

The Texas Firm in Town.

It is positively stated that A. P. Ryan and Robert E. Cross, the Texas merchants indicted by the grand jury at the instance of several wholesale business houses here, were seen in town this morning. For several weeks past they having been dodging arrest in Texas. They come here with the view of giving bond, and it is said that they were seen this morning near the office of Mr. C. P. Ellerbe, one of the attorneys in the case. The depositions in the Wear-Boogher suit were resumed this morning. Mr. Bartlett testified that He sold goods to A. P. Ryan and Co. at Fort Worth, Tex., fifteen days before the failure. The goods were sold for Gauss, Hunicke & Co. and Mr. Cross of Ryan & Co. at that time stated they were in good financial condition and credit.

High Waters.

HOT SPRINGS, June 10.—Information is just received that last week the Little Missouri, the Big Fork, Calda and Ouachita Rivers, in Southwestern Arkansas, were higher than ever before known, and are devastating the plantations and causing severe loss and suffering.

A Sudden Strike.

CUMBERLAND, MD., June 10.—This morning train men on the Eckhart Road refused to transport the coal mined by imported labor. The company have one engine at work this afternoon, and say the positions will be supplied with willing men on Monday.

A Centennial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

A MOTHER'S MADNESS.

She Poisons Her Four Children With Strychnine,

Lays Them Out Beautifully on a Bed,

Welcomes Her Husband Home and Dies in Convulsions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 10.—When Casper Seybolt, a baker, returned home from his nights work this morning, his wife gleefully met him at the door and said to him: "Come in Casper, come in and see our little children. They are all dead. Gone to Heaven. Casper, see how pretty they are. Every one has nice flowers for the angels."

A HORRIBLE SIGHT

met his gaze as he approached the bed. Laid out for burial and decorated with flowers were Matilda aged 12, Anton aged 7, Annie two years old, and Agnes the baby four months. All were stone dead, except Matilda who lingered until 10 o'clock. Mrs. Seybolt managed to to tell that she gave them all strychnine laying them out as they died. She had barely finished the recital when she was overtaken with convulsions and died in a few minutes. No cause except insanity can be given. The family bear a good reputation.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Casper Seybolt is a baker and works at night. When he left home last evening his wife began preparations for a horrible deed. They had four children, aged twelve, seven, and two and a half years, and a baby four months. She dressed them in fresh, white clothes, with bright ribbons, gave them strychnine, and when they died laid them out carefully with flowers in their hands and all surroundings made as beautiful as possible. Then she took a dose of poison herself, having also put on a fresh white chemise with ribbons in it. This was just before the return of her husband. At 5 o'clock this morning, when he appeared at the door, she met him, told him to come in and see the children all dead and gone to heaven. "See how pretty they are, with nice flowers for angels." One of the children was alive, but has since died. Mrs. Seybolt died about 7 o'clock this morning. The cause of the demented woman's acts is not known.

Foundered at Sea.

NEW YORK, June 10.—News has reached this city of the mysterious foundering at sea of the British steamer Peredo, May 8, about twenty miles northeast of Porto Santo, one of the Madeira Islands. The vessel was from Rio Janeiro for Glasgow and the circumstances attending the loss show how weak may be a British built steamship. The Peredo was an iron vessel of 1,029 tons gross register, built at Westhartlepool, England, in 1872, hence she cannot be termed an old vessel. From the statements made by twenty-two of the crew who were saved out of a total of twenty-six, it appears that in a moderate head of sea she cracked amidships. Her decks started up and she foundered in two minutes afterwards. Fifteen of the crew managed to save themselves in one of the boats, seven others were saved by clinging to some of the wreckage and four were drowned

Mrs. Melville's Plaint.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SHARON HILL, PA., June 10.—Mrs. Melville denounces Danenhower's treatment of her. She says he failed to visit her; that when he was at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, he sent her messages to call on him by individuals personally disagreeable to her; passed her home on the train to Washington; would not step off a moment, although her family was on the platform waiting for Melville. She has not received a word from him since, not even of Engineer Melville's message to his wife.

Port Charges.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—A movement is on foot for a reduction of the terminal charges on grain designed to put the port of Philadelphia on a parity with New York. It is proposed to charge for receiving, weighing and storing for the first ten days or any part thereof, and delivering to vessels alongside the elevator, ½ of a cent per bushel, and for storing beyond the first ten days an additional charge of ¼ of a cent per bushel for each subsequent period, days or parts thereof.

Friends' Meetings.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 10.—The New England annual meetings of Friends began the week's session here this morning. Among those present by credentials are: Yandiev Warren, of Tennessee; Asa Tuttle, of Kansas; John P. Pennington, Barton K. Jones, Ephraim M. Jones, Amos M. Kenworthy and M. Birford, of Indiana, and Caroline Talbott and Maria Stanley, of Ohio.

Shot His Father, Whose Head He Took for that of a Skunk.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 10.—A. Barker, Suanee county, mistaking the head of his father, who was drunk and sleeping in the grass, for a skunk, shot him dead.

Assignment.

PADUCAH, KY., June 10.—W. A. Bell, druggist, of this city, made an assignment to-day; assignee, N. G. Milam. Liabilities $3,000; assets, mostly property, $4,500. Bell has been a merchant here for twenty-five years, and his failure was caused principally by depreciation of property.

Death of Mr. Ben Chase.

Ben L. Chase, the paying teller of the Boatmen's Bank, died at 4 o'clock this morning at the residence of his family, No. 3012 Cass avenue, after an illness of only a week. The funeral will take place at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will be well attended, as few business men can boast of the large number of friends whom Mr. Chase's warm heart drew toward him. He leaves a wife and family.

THE OSGOOD TUB RACE MEDAL.

THE OBEAR DIAMOND MEDAL.

These beautiful medals, designed and executed by MERMOD, JACCARD & CO., FOURTH AND LOCUST STREETS, are on exhibition in the show window of this firm, and are attracting great attention. The beauty and uniqueness of the designs elicit universal admiration.

WASHINGTON.

News From the Capital of Our Nation.

Wheeler Refuses the Tariff Commissionership—Guiteau—Political News.

Guiteau.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Guiteau has given up all hope in the law, but hopes for the President's clemency. He said he had no confidence in Reed's last move. He told him it would not succeed. He spends much time reading the Bible and takes little exercise, saying he is getting lazy.

HELPER'S RAILROAD.

Mr. Helper is much troubled over the committee's unfavorable report on his bill for a commission to inquire into the practicability of a railroad to South America. He says the committee gave him no opportunity to explain the project and treated him unjustly.

CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

The Elections Committee is pushing its work. It looks as though the House is likely to unseat a half-dozen more Democrats before adjournment. Messrs. Richardson and Tillman, of South Carolina, Shelby, of Alabama, and Manning, of Mississippi, are already marketed for removal.

POSTAL CARDS.

The Post-office Committee will probably report in favor of a postal card with a flexible flap to conceal the message, to take the place of the present card.

THE MOREY LETTER.

Johnny Davenport is said to be discouraged about the Morey letter at not being successful, as he hoped, in solving the mystery.

DOYLE'S CASE.

Folger has as yet reached no conclusion regarding Doyle's case. Doyle's friends claim that his bonds were not counterfeit, but were printed from the genuine plate, and agree to tell how he obtained it and all about it if he is released.

CANNON.

Cannon is still waiting, unable to get his salary for the time he served or his mileage. A report will be made from the committee to-day in favor of paying him off and letting him go.

The Oregon Election.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 10.—A Portland, Oregon, dispatch says: The average Republican majority of the State ticket is 1,800. George will have less than 3,600 in the State, the largest majority ever given a candidate. Moody, for Governor, will have about 100 less. The Republicans have the Legislature by a certain majority of 10, which may be increased to 13.

Wheeler Declines.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A Post special from Malone, N. Y., says ex-Vice-President declines the appointment on the Tariff Commission for the reason his health will not permit the task. The Post's Washington special says it is understood Secretary Folger has determined upon a change in the office of Superintendent of Engraving and Printing.

Postponed.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The meeting of the Windom committee is postponed until Wednesday.

House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10.—The House went into committee, and resumed consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

HUNYADI JANOS, Friedrichshall, Rakoczy, Carlsbader, Nassau Seltzer, Apollinaris, Vichy and other mineral waters, by the bottle or case, at MELLIER'S, 711 Washington avenue.

Christian Brothers' Commencement—The Ennis Medal.

The award for the design and construction of this medal, which was mentioned in this paper yesterday, was made to-day to Mermod, Jaccard & Co., of Fourth and Locust streets. Several designs were submitted, but that of Mermod, Jaccard & Co. exceeded in beauty and originality, and to them the award was made by Mr. Richard Ennis, who designs that this medal shall be the cause of increased efforts to excel in the study of music of which he is an ardent lover.

FROM INDIANA

Came the Brookfield Bank Robbers.

Three of Them Identified as Brothers.

The Woman's Story—Taken Before the Circuit Court.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—The Brookfield bank robbers were captured yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, at a farm house in Adair county, about thirteen miles west of Kirksville, where they had taken refuge for the night. Immediately after the robbery, a posse was formed to hunt the robbers, and their trail was never lost. They first overtook the outlaws at New Boston, Linn county, where a number of shots were exchanged, and where one of the pursuers had his mule shot under him. Again they had a lively skirmish at Winnegan in Sullivan County, where two horses were shot, and where one of the pursuing party was slightly wounded. After this fight the robbers abandoned their horses, swam the river—which was running very high—and took refuge on the Hooper farm, where they fortified themselves by making port-holes in the walls of a log hut. The house was soon surrounded by the posse, and as the moon shone out bright and clear very little opportunity for escape was offered, but a vigilant watch was kept up for fear the outlaws would make a dash for liberty. In the morning the robbers offered to surrender if they were promised a safe journey to the jail. This was granted and they were ordered to hold up their hands and come out one by one. In the house were found sixty revolvers, one hundred pounds of cartridges and a number of knives and other weapons. At first $398 in silver was found on the robbers, but one of them finally "squealed" and Marshal McArthur went out to a place eight miles from Brookfield, where he found the balance, $4,792. The men had lived on a farm near Kirksville for four months past, and were suspected of being the horse-thieves who on Saturday night stole the horses near Kirksville, and officers were on their track before the bank robbery and came into Brookfield an hour after the bank was robbed. The names given by the outlaws are Winfield Allen, Frank Ward, Bert Ward and Ben Fox. Frank Ward was married, and the others lived with him. They were all under thirty years of age. Gov. Crittenden has telegraphed to the Adair county officers to deliver the criminals to be tried for the bank robbery first, and then if necessary they can be held for the horse-stealing.

In Brookfield.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKFIELD, MO., June 10.—The special train with the bank robbers in charge of Marshal McArthur and fifty men arrived here at 1:30 this morning. A great crowd received them, but there was no trouble here. The prisoners were identified—three as Frank, Albert and Fred. Mason, three brothers, formerly of this county. Frank is tall, dark and bronzed, Fred. shorter and fairer. Albert is tall and hard-looking. The other one is evidently a newcomer to this region. They are all hard-looking young men. At the house where they were captured were a lot of arms, burglars' tools, masks, ammunition, etc. The spot was well selected for secrecy, in the bed of the Chariton River, and a stable on the premises was fixed for secreting horses. The four were here made, under threats, to disgorge $1,400 secreted on their persons, and the woman, Frank Mason's wife, went this morning under escort to recover the bag of gold coin, about $1,400 more, which she says she had under the floor of the house. The four prisoners were taken to Linneus at 5 o'clock this morning, the Circuit Court being in session. The men were evidently in training for robbery and burglary as a business and are reticent when questioned and cool and collected. They admit the robbery and talk carelessly of the facts of the pursuit, but will tell nothing of their previous history and give different names. They agree in stating that two of them are from Indiana. The woman, who is young and pretty, and devoted to Frank, says she was recently from Ellsberry, Ind., and only came to Missouri five weeks ago. She is as keen and cool as the men, and no doubt privy to all their plans. It is believed that they will plead guilty, but as they have some $1,600 yet hidden, they may resort to defense and the law's delay's. There is a profound feeling of satisfaction at the capture, and the plucky posse and their allies from Kirksville under Sheriff Shaefer deserve great credit for their energy, grit and perseverance in effecting it.

RAPID RETRIBUTION.

The Murder of a Pal Quickly Followed by a Lynching.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAS VEGAS, NEW MEXICO, June 10.—James Mahan and John Graves, young men employed on the railroad section at the Pecos Crossing, quarreled last evening, during which Mahan shot Graves through the heart. While trying to escape into the mountains Mahan was overtaken and lynched. The body is still hanging from the railroad bridge. Mahan was from East Saginaw, Michigan.

An Interrupted Prize Fight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 10.—A prize fight between Bennie Greene, of Providence, R. I., the champion light weight of Rhode Island, and Jim Murray of New York, began in a sporting house on Coney Island at 1 25 a. m. Three rounds were fought, neither being much hurt. Murray had a slight advantage. When the mounted police raided the place a general stampede resulted. Murray and Dan Doherty, his second, and others were arrested.

NO ROOM IN RHODY.

NEW YORK, June 10. — James Murray and Benjamin Green, representing the pugilistic element of Providence, came here last evening and went to Coney Island for the purpose of fighting a prize fight for $300 a side and the light weight championship of Rhode Island. The battle commenced this morning in a hotel on the island, but after fighting five rounds the police appeared and took Murray and his second into custody. The others scampered off at a gait hitherto unequaled by man or beast. When asked why they came all the way from Providence to fight, one of the roughs said: "There hain't room enough in the whole State of Rhode Island to pitch a twenty-four-foot ring."

WAYS THAT ARE DARK.

The Little Wall Street Game That Failed.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Post says: The malicious reports circulated yesterday to the effect that a prominent banking-house, Woerishoffer & Co., was in trouble, appear to have been part of a concocted plan to break the stock market. From all parts of the country telegraphic inquiries came about this house as if by arrangement, and to make the story plausible, bets were offered the house would fail. Concurrently with all this large blocks of stocks with which Woerishoffer & Co. had been identified were thrown on the market. This kind of warfare is so dishonorable and at critical times may be productive directly and indirectly of such damage that the Stock Exchange should investigate the matter and lead the way in such a prosecution as the law warrants.

THE FIGHTING DOCTOR.

A Monument to Col. Florence M. Cornyn

Unveiled With Appropriate Ceremonies This Afternoon in Calvary Cemetery—Cornyn's Life and Death.

At 3 p. m. this afternoon the monument to Col. Florence M. Cornyn of the Tenth Missouri Cavalry was unveiled at Calvary Cemetery. The exercises were most solemn in their nature, a befitting tribute to the memory of one of the illustrious heroes that served in the war. Since Col. Cornyn's death his friends have always been desirous that his memory should be cherished in some lasting manner, and the monument unveiled is the outcome of their exertions.

was born in Belmont county, O., in 1829. His parents were natives of County Leitrim, Ireland, and had come to this country twenty years before. The father was equally well known for his patriotism and his hospitality, and it is to his teaching of love for their adopted country that the fact may be attributed that the three sons entered the army.

Florence, the youngest, was mainly educated at the Catholic College of St. Mary's, in Marion County, Kentucky, where he was graduated in 1846 with high honors. He always intended to follow the medical profession, and his studies were shaped in that direction. Rev. Father Hill, at present professor of philosophy, was one of his classmates at St. Mary's College. After graduation he returned home and began the study of medicine, subsequently pursuing it in New York, under Dr. Charles L. Hildreth and other physicians. Later he took a course of lectures in the medical department of the University of New York and graduated there with considerable distinction. In 1849 he crossed the plains and, arriving at Sacramento City, was the first to hang his shingle out as a doctor in that city. In 1852, he came to St. Louis and settled, soon attaining a fair practice. Ten years later he was placed in charge of the City Hospital, a position he held until the early part of 1861. About this time the murmurs of war began in this city as elsewhere. Col. Cornyn, however, had no sympathy with the Confederate element in the State. He resigned his position in the City Hospital and also his appointment as Surgeon-General of militia in Gen. D. M. Frost's staff. In his letter to Gen. Frost, on this occasion, he stated that his sympathies were still with that country which had made his exiled father an American citizen. Soon after Col. Cornyn attached himself to the First Missouri Volunteers, organized under Frank P. Blair, as regimental surgeon. With them he was present at Camp Jackson, and he also accompanied the expedition to Jefferson City in search of Claib Jackson and others. He was present at Boonville and Wilson's Creek; and Frank Blair said with a smile, after the affair at the former place, that if he had a brigade of such men as the two noncombatants of his regiment, Surgeon Cornyn and Chaplain Pile, he could march to Montgomery.

At the Council of War, held before the battle of Wilson's Creek, it is well known that Lyon, who wished to fight, was deferring to the wishes of his officers, who wished to dissuade him from so doing, when Surgeon Cornyn advised him strongly, and his advice carried the day and brought about the battle.

After the battle Cornyn accompanied his regiment, now known as the Missouri Light Artillery, down the river. At Shiloh he won fresh laurels and attracted the attention of Gen. Grant himself. On the afternoon of the first day's fight a number of artillery men started to run away from a Parrott gun. Surgeon Cornyn seized a ramrod, rallied the men, took charge of the gun, helped to load and sighted the gun himself and fought them for two hours, saving the gun and the honor of the company. This episode gave Cornyn the epithet of the "fighting doctor."

Soon after he procured authority to raise a regiment—the Twenty-eighth Missouri Infantry. He did not succeed in this scheme, but soon after he went to Corinth as Colonel of the Tenth Missouri Cavalry. As a cavalry leader he first distinguished himself in the pursuit of Price and Van Dorn after the battle of Corinth. In this pursuit he was bold, free and daring. He was never so much himself as in the midst of a fight. The system which he inaugurated had points peculiar to himself.

It was his rule, on entering a place, to issue a proclamation demanding provisions for his troops, and making known the ultimatum if they were refused. Some of these proclamations were strikingly unique and expressive. "Citizens of Iuka," one of them read, "the Tenth Missouri Cavalry are among you, and they are hungry and must be fed. You have provisions and forage, and they have none. It is, therefore, necessary for you to furnish them what they require—willingly, if you choose, and if not, then otherwise." At another place, Savannah, Tenn., where the citizens had attempted to betray a small Union garrison into the hands of the rebel Col. Biffle, he issued a similar document, reciting the facts, and saying he had concluded to visit upon the traitor population "a little of the legitimate vengeance of the Government," closing as follows:

"Therefore, in the name of our glorious republic, I hereby make good the grand exordium of the Declaration of Independence, to-wit: 'All men are created free and equal;' and to-day I free and take with me from the town every colored creature who inherits with the human race everywhere the image of his Maker and an immortal soul."

Another idiosyncrasy of his was to go around with a little brass band and serenade those who had contributed to the supply store. He fought bravely throughout the war. The manner of his death was most tragic. He was killed, not by an enemy, but by a friend with whom he had quarreled and in a court of justice where everybody should have been sacred from assault. He was shot down unarmed and unresisting. The following letter gives an eye-witness' account of the manner of his murder:

CHICAGO, June 8, 1882.

Dr. P. S. O'Reilly, President Cornyn Monument Association:

DEAR SIR—Seeing a notice of the intended unveiling of a monument to Col. Cornyn, on the 10th of this month, I take the liberty of addressing you in regard to the circumstances of his death. I was employed as stenographer in the military court in 1863, at Corinth, Mississippi, when Col. Cornyn was on trial upon charges preferred by Maj. Bowen. On the day of the sad occurrence a point of objection was raised by the court, and, while considering it, as was the custom, the defendant and others, not members of the court, were requested to withdraw to an ante-room of the building in which the court was held. Shortly after passing into the ante-room, I was standing near Col. Cornyn, who was walking back and forth with his hands behind him, when Maj. Bowen entered the south door of the room from the hall. As the eyes of the two men met Col. Cornyn stopped, facing Maj. Bowen, and they looked at each other an instant, when the Major drew his revolver and commenced firing. I was in the rear and a little to the right of Col. Cornyn. The first ball missed him and passed out of a window near us. Col. Cornyn had not his hands under his coat, but they were outside the coat behind him, and dropped to his side as he stepped back towards me and the door leading to the court-room. The second shot took effect and the Colonel staggered against the door to his left, which was at that moment opened by some member of the court, and he fell in the door and the passage leading into the court-room, when Maj. Bowen stepped forward, and leaning over him fired the third and fatal shot. Then, putting his revolver away, he quickly walked out of the room into the hall. Immediately after, in giving himself up, and at the subsequent trial at Memphis, Tenn., at which I was a witness, Maj. Bowen claimed to have done the shooting in self-defense, but I assure you, as I testified at that time, that there was no effort made on the part of Col. Cornyn to shoot, nor had he anything upon his person with which to shoot, and I believe to this day that Major Bowen knew it.

I write this knowing that you are interested in these facts, and as a friend of Col. Cornyn, whom I learned, in my short acquaintance with him at that court, to respect and love. I have in my possession a poem, written by Col. Cornyn in regard to his regiment, a copy of which I inclose. Col. Cornyn, an "American Celt," as he was accustomed to call himself, was a man of good heart and his loves were: first, his mother; second, America; third, Ireland.

Yours, respectfully,

DAN BROWN.

Calvary Cemetery was crowded this afternoon with people to witness the ceremony of unveiling the monument. After religious services by Fathers Henry, Walsh, Phelan and Hayes on the mound near the monument, Prof. M. A. Glisinn led a choir of 40 voices, which sang the chorus "Raise High the Banner." After music by the band of the College of the Christian Brothers, Dr. P. S. O'Reilly made the opening address.

Dr. O'Reilly introduced his address with a brief history of the formation of the Monument Association and the resolution to erect the monument, which was decided upon ten months ago. He paid a tribute to the dead, who in his civil and military positions had rendered great services, in commemoration of which the monument, especially designed in military style, was erected. At the conclusion of his remarks Dr. O'Reilly read the letter published above, and then introduced Mr. Peter L. Foy, the orator of the day. Mr. Foy described the life and character of deceased, as given above, and paid him a deserved and eloquent tribute.

At the close of the address, after several musical selections, Miss Jennie K. Harrison unveiled the monument, and, after some music, the large audience dispersed.

The Ætna's Pyramid.

There are other pyramids than those erected in the land of the Phaorah. We refer more particularly to the pyramid of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, which appears in another column. It is a grand testimonial to the fidelity with which the interests of its policy-holders have been managed. For nearly half a century the name "Ætna Life" has been a synonym for economy, integrity, solidity and upright dealings with its policy-holders.

ABOUT TOWN.

THE Clay pigeon tournament of the Future Gun Club will be held to-morrow, when a big shoot is expected.

THE lawn party of the Esmeralda Club will be held June 16, and in case of unfavorable weather it will be postponed until June 22.

THE Williamson-Stewart Paper Company filed an attachment suit this afternoon against G. F. and A. A. Voightman to recover $410 60.

THE annual picnic of the brewers connected with and employed in the twenty-one breweries in St. Louis will take place at Anthony & Kuhn's Garden to-morrow.

THE members of Lincoln Lodge, No. 190, D. O. H. of Carondelet will picnic at St. Paul Station to-morrow. They will meet at 8:30 a. m. on Main street and Missouri Pacific Railroad.

WM. LUCAS, of Ripon, Wis., donated this morning to the Fair Grounds a pair of badgers. One was also received from Sioux City, Iowa. These gifts were very gratefully received, as Mr. Kalb has been trying for eighteen months to get some specimens of this animal.

AT 11:30 o'clock last night a fire broke out in the tailor shop of J. S. Stumer, southwest corner of Gravois road and Ciara street. The fire was caused by a leaking gasoline stove. The fire was extinguished before the arrival of the engines.

TO-MORROW the annual convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will be held at St. Patrick Hall, when the delegates from the different divisions in the city and from the various counties in the State will make financial and business reports to the State body.

LAST Sunday the ladies and gentlemen connected with Lesser's dry goods establishment, on Franklin avenue, participated in an excursion to Creve Cœur Lake. The day was very pleasantly spent with music, dancing and delightful rambles around that fashionable resort.

TO-MORROW the Baltimore club will pay its first visit to St. Louis, and, as their nine has been considerably strengthened of late, they will give the Browns a good game. Their last contest with the St. Louis club resulted in the defeat of the latter after one of the best played games of the season.

THOMAS GALLAGHER and Hugh Redmond went into a disorderly house kept by Stella Stone, and, being drunk, the two men raised a bit of a row. A complaint was made by the woman, and this morning the two men were fined for disturbing the quiet of her usually placid life. Gallagher was assessed $100 and costs and Redmond $20 in the First District Police Court.

THE Chicago and Alton Railroad Company have just issued a handsome hand-book of summer resorts. The illustrations of scenes along the line of the road are not the hackneyed wood cuts which have appeared year after year in similar publications and have become tiresome by constant repetition, but are all new and attractive pictures. The traveler by this line can reach every summer pleasure ground in this country from New York to California.

COMMENCEMENT exercises of Clark Academy will begin on Thursday, 12th inst. at 9 o'clock a. m., and continue till 12 m. two days in succession. The first day the pupils of the third academic department will be examined. On the second day the students of the first and second academic departments will be examined. The varied programme promises a good educational entertainment. On the first day Rev. Dr. Roberts of the Episcopal Church will address the school. On the second day Rev. Dr. Tudor will give an educational talk. The patrons and friends of education are invited.

MR. E. A. BEHAN, formerly of Bates & Behan, of this city, has removed to Janesville, Wis., where he will engage in the grocery and produce business. He carries with him the good wishes of hosts of friends.

Permanent Improvements.

Fifty-one building permits were issued by Commissioner Beattie during the past week, twenty-nine of them being for brick and twenty two for frame structures. The total amount represented is $93,605, only $6,505 of this amount is for frame buildings. The most noteworthy permits of the week were the one issued to Mr. George P. Whitelaw, authorizing him to build a $20,000 stone front store on Fourth street, between Lucas avenue and Morgan street, and the one to Thomas Halpin, authorizing the construction of a $10,000 stone front store building on the south side of Olive, between Grand avenue and Vandeventer avenue. The total amount invested in building improvements in St Louis since January 1, 1882, is $2,774,490; $211,652 of this amount is for frame structures.

New Buildings.

Mr. Louis Lyman's new brick dwelling to be situated on the south side of Lasalle street, between Grattan and Dillon streets, will cost $2,750.

Three hundred dollars will pay for the frame stable and shed which Mr. George Hell will build in the rear of his premises on the west side of the Old County road, between Courtois and Scherum streets.

Mr. Herman Koch is about to build a $200 frame stable in the rear of his new dwelling, located on the south side of Russell avenue between Nebraska and Pennsylvania avunes. The dwelling when completed will cost $2,800 more.

Pounding a Secretary.

There has been a terrible stirring-up among the management of the St. Louis Coffin Company, a corporation doing an extensive business in the manufacture of cases for the departed. This afternoon a suit for $25,000 damages was filed by Wm. H. Steele, Secretary and Treasurer of the company, against Wm. A. Lewis, John H. Lewis and George Hosecoster, President, Vice-President and Director of the Coffin Company. Mr. Steele alleges that he was brutally beaten, bruised and disfigured about the face and body by the defendants, and that he has suffered great mental and bodily anguish in consequence. He asks for damages in the sum named.

A MEETING of the stockholders of the Missouri Medical College Building Association was held this afternoon at the college for the purpose of raising the capital stock from $50,000 to $60,000.

CITY HALL NOTES.

Twenty two burial certificates were issued this morning.

Tony Sanfellopis, an Italian peddler, living at No. 1227 North Seventh street, had one of his legs broken this morning. His wound was dressed at the City Dispensary and the man sent to his home.

The Board of Public Improvements this morning received and opened bids for the annual macadam contracts for the ensuing year. The aggregate amount of the dust-producing material purchased by the city for street repairs is in the neighborhood of $60,000.

Receipts at the City Treasury to-day are as follows: From the United States Government, $389 70; from the City Marshal, on account of the Second District Police Court, $40; from the City Collector, $20,474 04; from the Inspector of Weights and Measures, $20; from the Park Commissioner, $80; from the Recorder of Deeds, $101 50; from the Bridge Scales, $91.

Mayor Ewing is in receipt of a copy of the annual report of the Howard Association, of England, for the year 1881. The report deals with the condition of the English reformatory and prison institutions and with the question of vagrancy in Europe. It advocates a change in the discipline of English prisons and recommends the substitution of indefinite sentences on criminals for the present system of sentencing for definite terms. It holds that the idea to be placed before the prisoner is that he can earn his liberty by his labor in prison just as a freeman earns his daily bread. The report bestows great praise on the juvenile reform prisons of the State of Massachusetts as reform institutions. The question of intemperance as a cause of crime is very fully dealt with.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The Council will hold a regular meeting next Monday evening.

Miss Annie Ziska leaves for Kansas City to-night on an extended visit to relatives.

The East St. Louis Foundry, incorporated a short time since, will commence operations Monday, employing fifty men.

The Board of School Trustees are about to commence proceedings against the city for recovery of one half the dram-shop license unpaid to the School Treasurer.

Deputy Marshal McCord passed through East St. Louis this morning with John Brown, en route to Chester Penitentiary, who was convicted and sentenced for two years for robbing a post-office.

The case of Rosia Callaway vs. Dosia Reed was set for hearing in 'Squire Draggon's court this morning, but sent to 'Squire Long on a change of venue. The case was dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

A number of gentlemen have organized a company for the purpose of running a three-masted schooner on Cahokia Creek. The first trip will be a moonlight excursion to-night, the schooner being in charge of the following gentlemen: Capt. W. P. Burns, P. Fenton, J. Walsh, with P. Flannery as treasurer.

A Brother's Charge.

Walter F. McEntire filed to-day in the Circuit Court for Joseph W. Branch, as executor of the late Judge Irwin Z. Smith, a suit for notes, money borrowed, board and office rent against Ford Smith. The defendant is an attorney practicing at this bar and is a brother of the deceased Judge. He figures somewhat in Republican local politics. The notes protested for non-payment date back from 1874 to 1881, amounting to $2,553 83. The account is for $8,171 60, and extends from September, 1869, to January, 1878. The amounts borrowed figured various months for $100, $200, $300, $400. One item is $1,066 66 for office rent, four years, and March, 1871, "board" $450, is another item of this account.

To the Public.

It's more unfortunate to me than to my customers that I have no spread eagle Carriage Parlors in which to display my work, but I have the best variety, the more modern styles of finer materials and of the most superior workmanship of any establishment outside of New York City.

THE BIG STRIKE.

The Iron Workers at Cincinnati Resume Work Monday.

The Situation in St. Louis Unchanged—No Signs of Yielding Apparent.

The St. Louis iron manufacturers who were in attendance at the meeting held in Pittsburg on Wednesday returned home last night. That they came back with rigid spines, the following interview with Mr. M. Helmbacher, President of the Helmbacher Forge and Mill, will sufficiently attest:

"What was done at the meeting in Pittsburg, Mr. Helmbacher?" inquired the reporter.

"I am not disposed to tell you everything that was done, but I can say this, that the manufacturers will not sign the new scale."

"No matter what happens?"

"No matter what happens."

"What will be the upshot of this resolution?"

"Simply this, that if the men want work they will have to accept our terms. Not only will we refuse to sign the scale that was presented on the first of June, but we will not sign any scale whatever in future. Men wanting work hereafter will be required to sign individual contracts with their employers and at such figures as the manufacturers feel justified in paying."

"How will the new plan work?"

"Satisfactorily to us, unquestionably. Heretofore manufacturers have had to be very cautious about accepting large contracts because they could never be certain that their men would not strike just at a critical time. The men kept well posted about the work going on in the mill and any time they felt disposed they could spoil everything by striking. The new plan will give manufacturers a better idea of how they stand and will leave them masters of the situation."

"Will the mills here resume work on Monday?"

"No, sir—not unless the men accept our terms."

From Mr. Helmbacher's office the reporter proceeded to the home of one of the oldest and most intelligent employes of the Chouteau, Harrison & Valle mill, in North St. Louis. The reporter stated the object of his call, and related the substance of the above interview with Mr. Helmbacher.

"Well, if I understand rightly, this means a fight between the Amalgamated Association and the manufacturers."

"That is what it would seem to mean," commented the reporter.

"Well, the manufacturers will have to give in this time, just as they did before.

"How long do you think they will hold out?"

"Not more than two weeks. This talk about an oversurplus of iron being on hand is all nonsense. There is no such surplus as they try to make out. We know just as much about that as they do. The stock on hand will become exhausted inside of two weeks, and then they will have to take us back at our own prices. The Amalgamated Association can afford to hold out much better than the manufacturers can. We don't care to work in this weather anyhow, and had just as lief as not that the strike should last all summer."

"How will the men live while idle?"

"Oh, very comfortably. Most of us saved up enough to last us, and if the worst comes to the worst, which, mind you, is not altogether improbable, we have two funds that never fail us: these are the treasury of the association and the assistance of the steel workers, who continue to work, and who, if necessary, will pay into a common fund, for the benefit of those men who are out on strike, ten per cent of their wages. But the worst will not come to the worst, I tell you. The manufacturers may bluster just as much as they please, but they will yield, and that before long."

"Will the men consent to work on the terms explained by Mr. Helmbacher?"

"No, sir. They will work as before. The men will not sign contracts of the kind described by Mr. Helmbacher, but Mr. Helmbacher and every other iron manufacturer will sign the scale presented by the men just as heretofore. I deny that the men in the mills ever retard the manufacturers from taking large contracts by a disposition to strike when the work is well under way, but unfinished, and I defy any manufacturer to say that such a thing has ever occurred. We gave the manufacturers timely notice this time of our intention to strike the 1st of June, unless they signed the new scale, and that plan is the one which is always followed. The truth of the whole matter is just this: The mills are now making necessary repairs, and as soon as these are all finished they will start up again, and on our terms."

AT CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, June 10.—At 9 o'clock this forenoon a committee of workmen from the iron mills met the proprietors of the mills and made an agreement with them to eliminate the word "forever" from the contract, and to go to work on Monday on the terms of the compact of last October, thus amended. Prices at present will be the same as paid when they quit, and will so remain until the scale is fixed at Pittsburg, when that will be the Cincinnati scale.

Christian Brothers' Commencement—The Ennis Medal.

The award for the design and construction of this medal, which was mentioned in this paper yesterday, was made to-day to Mermod, Jaccard & Co., of Fourth and Locust streets. Several designs were submitted, but that of Mermod, Jaccard & Co. exceeded in beauty and originality, and to them the award was made by Mr. Richard Ennis, who designs that this medal shall be the cause of increased efforts to excel in the study of music of which he is an ardent lover.

AFTER EIGHT YEARS

The Body of Capt. Dix is Said to be Discovered.

Eight years ago the captain of the Pauline Carroll, a boat in the lower river trade, fell overboard and was drowned, causing quite a sensation at the time. Nothing was heard of the body until to-day, when important testimony reached the members of the family. William Richards, a mate on the river, came to the front with the statement that the captain had been buried fully eight years since at Wittenburg, a point on the river below Ste. Genevieve in Perry county. The captain had some few personal effects, a diamond ring, a breast-pin and about $200 in cash. This property, it is alleged, was turned over to the authorities. The whole affair calls for an investigation. Henry Carson, the brother-in-law of Capt. Dix, is also investigating the murder.

EXCURSION TO MONTESANO.

The Ladies of the Round Table Escorted by the Cavalry.

In compliment to Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, who presided over the recent encampment at the Armory, and Mrs. Kelley, her daughter, the Misses Morrison, Durkee, Hoyt, Shaw, Garrison, Hopkins, Abend, Speck and Ames, who assisted at the Round Table Tent, the St. Louis cavalry have invited them to Montesano Springs on next Thursday, returning to the city on Friday. The cavalry will escort the ladies to Jefferson Barracks, where the horses will be put up for the night, while the riders will proceed to Montesano Springs by train, returning to the Barracks for the horses on Friday morning. The line will be headed by four trumpeters, followed by a color-sergeant and guards. Mrs. Morrison with escort, will be followed by the Tally Ho coach and ladies of the Round Tent. A number of rigs and invited guests will occupy the next place, the cavalry bringing up the rear. At the Barracks some of the regular army officers, who have been invited will join the cavalcade and proceed to the Springs, where the guests will be entertained at the Montezuma Hotel, returning to the city on Friday.

NORMAL GRADUATION.

Eighteen Young Ladies Take Their Diplomas To-Day.

Interesting Essays and Fair Faces—The Class Will Soon Receive Work.

The regular semi-annual graduating exercises of the St. Louis Normal School took place this morning in the Normal School rooms, in the Polytechnic Building, Seventh and Chestnut streets. The friends of the graduating young ladies gathered in large numbers at an early hour, more than filling the large audience rooms and overflowing into the halls, while some were unable to get within hearing distance of the sounds of the voices of the fair essay readers.

THE GRADUATING CLASS numbers eighteen, as follows:

Josie Ambruster,
Mamie E. Carr,
Stella Clinton,
Hermina Dependahl,
Theresa Dependahl,
Althea Garriott,
Mollie Henley,
Lizzie M. Harris,
Viola Heltzell,
Katie E. Henry,
Annie B. Keogh,
Anna F. McGovern,
Kate O'Donnell,
Josie C. O'Hara,
Lizzie O'Neil,
Hattie R. Purkitt,
Ottilie Schierstein,
Rosa Skinner.

The exercises were opened promptly at half past 10 o'clock, and were conducted by Prof. Soldan, principal of the school. On account of the number in the class only a few were allowed to read their essays, and even their names did not appear upon the programmes. After music by the whole school "Ave Santissime" Miss Mamie E. Carr read the introductory essay entitled "Tact." It was a calm, well-considered effort with thought clearly expressed, and was rendered so happily as to cause the reader to be rewarded with liberal applause and many bouquets. Tact was dwelt upon chiefly in its relation to the teaching profession.

After another well-rendered musical effort—a chorus, "The Cedar on the Mountain"—Miss Mollie Hanley read an essay entitled "Man the Builder of His Fate." Like the preceding effort, it was of superior order and evinced careful preparation. It dwelt upon educational work largely and the building of teachers.

Owing to the great crowd of people present and the constant flutter of innumerable fans, it was not always possible to follow the young ladies in their readings, so that a connected summary of the essays has not been attempted in this report. To do justice to the fair graduates would be impossible within the limits of a column.

THE NEXT AND MOST INTERESTING ESSAY was read by Miss Althea Garriott, upon the subject, "Woman's Work in the World." She began by reviewing history, instancing and eulogizing the queens of history and the queens of society; then passed to woman's work of to-day. Some think that woman can do all that man does, but the golden medium presents the fairer view. Woman's work as a missionary is unquestioned. Many new vocations are opening to her. Woman's small trials were dwelt upon. Some men think woman's mission is to talk. The essayist thought that the talk ought not to be interpreted to prate.

The class poem, "Towards the Goal," was composed and read by Miss Annie B. Keogh. It was a very pretty and rhythmical production, evincing considerable poetic ability in the author. It was a class poem of even more than the average ability produced by so high a grade school as our Normal. The young lady should pursue the muse to some extent, and not render all her talents in future to the art of teaching.

Next followed a chorus and solo, "With a Laugh," in which Miss Garriott sang the solo quite charmingly.

AN ESSAY.

"The Night Brings Out the Stars," together with the valedictory address, was read by Miss Hattie R. Purkitt. The essay was certainly one of the best of the day, instancing well how trouble and distress are necessary to bring out the great that is in human nature. Many instances were mentioned from history. Still there is no night without a star. In the farewell address thanks were appropriately returned to the Board of Public Schools and the teachers. The wish was happily and wittily added, "We hope soon to be able to put in practice what we have learned here" an allusion to the fact that graduates often have to wait years for an appointment. The address to classmates was short but most prettily and effectively delivered, so much so that a number of the interested hearers were hardly able to restrain tears.

A couple of parting hymns, written by members of the class and well rendered by members of the school, closed the regular exercises of the day. Music of the hymns was writen by Mr. E. Froelich. Generally speaking the music of the school cannot be too highly praised. Mr. Froelich is the conductor in this branch.

Prof. Soldan next read his regular semi-annual report. The graduating class were declared to have done most excellent work, making an average of 78.2 as against an average of 77.7 made by the whole school.

After the report, President Judson, of the School Board, made an address and awarded the diplomas to the class. He said there was every prospect that all of them would soon be called upon to teach, and that this would be the case hereafter with graduating classes.

After the singing of "Ring on, ye bells," from F. Abt, the audience dispersed, carrying with them the happy graduates and their wagon loads of beautiful bouquets.

CRAIG'S JOKES.

He Retails Them to Some Listeners This Morning.

How Judge Norton Swam in Four Inches of Water—A Kentucky Lawyer—Horseradish.

Gen. Jas. Craig, of St. Joseph, Mo., who served several terms in Congress, and who is regarded as the best stump speaker in Missouri, occupied a prominent position in the rotunda of the Planters' House this morning. His stock of anecdotes is enormuous, and always fresh, making him the center of attraction on all occasions. In early life Gen. Craig served a full apprenticeship as a tailor, but is now a retired banker. He is a small, round-shouldered old gentleman, dressed in the height of fashion, and his head was crowned to-day with a white plug hat, of tally-ho pattern. The General has a close-cut gray beard and mustache, twinkling blue eyes and a nervous habit of moving about while engaged in conversation. This morning he was pitted against the local joker, Col. Thoroughman, a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH joined the crowd of listeners.

"There you are, said Gen. Craig. "I was just telling the boys here of the joke I played on Judge Norton about the silver spoons, which you published the other day, but that was not the best one I had on him."

"Then relate the best," echoed a dozen voices.

"Well, we were riding along the road one chilly day in November, talking about court business and legal talent, when we struck a small stream that appeared to be about thirty yards wide. 'Hello,' said Judge Norton, 'this is a new stream to me. How shall we cross it?' Taking advantage of his ignorance, I pretended to survey the situation, and after emerging from the thicket I solemnly inquired, 'Judge, can you swim?' 'Like a fish,' he replied, while his eyes twinkled in the expectation of displaying his ability in that direction. 'I can't,' said I, 'so suppose you strip off and swim across, testing the depth as you go, and give me the advantage of your experience.' 'All right,' he said, dismounting from his horse. Then he removed all his clothing, tied them together, placed them safely between his teeth and started cautiously into the creek. I choked my handkerchief into my mouth to keep from laughing, while the Judge gravely waded across through exactly four inches of water; but you would have died to see his look of unutterable disgust when he reached the opposite bank. His feet were blue with mud, but his ankles were scarcely touched by the water. It was three straight days before he spoke to me again, and in the meantime I nearly laughed myself to death recalling the scene."

"Do you remember that Kentucky story of yours?" inquired Col. Thoroughman.

"Yes, but I cannot make an affidavit about its truthfulness. All heard it, I presume? No? Well, in my early days of law I was called into a murder case near Lexington, Ky., by a lawyer named Murphy, with whom I had previously had an acquaintance. That was long before the era of railroads, and I made the journey on horseback. About the time I thought I was reaching Murphy's neighborhood I came in contact with an old negro man, who occupied an exalted position on a load of cordwood. 'Hello, Sam,' said I 'do you know a lawyer in these parts named Murphy?' 'Golly, Boss,' said he, 'dat's massa's name. He lives just over de hill, in a big white house at de left of de road. But I say, boss, he ain't no lawyer.' 'You must be mistaken, Sam, for the Murphy I want is certainly engaged in the practice of law.' 'Don't care, boss; massa's name is Murphy, and dey calls him Colonel, but he ain't no lawyer.' Deciding that, if it was not the gentleman I desired, he could direct me to my destination, I rode on ahead of the negro, and was just about to disappear in a bend of the road when the old negro shouted for me to halt. When his wagon reached my side he said: 'Scuse me, boss; I said dat massa never was a lawyer. I remember now dat when he was a young man he did run for a lawyer, but I think he got beat.' The extreme gravity of the old darkey as he delivered himself of this speech unnerved me and I made old Kentucky ring with laughter."

"Do you eat horseradish now, General?" inquired Thoroughman, anxious to have the conversation continued.

"No," said Craig. "You remember how I happened to quit. In Washington City, several winters ago, old Van Trumpler, Erastus Wells and myself occupied a little round table together in the hotel. One day Mr. Wells invited Senator Thurman, of Ohio, to occupy the table with us. During the meal the water brought us our favorite dish of ribs of beef, upon which we commenced to pile up horseradish in our customary way. Senator Thurman watched us a few moments, then laid down his knife and fork and said: 'Gentlemen, you are all middle-aged men, and I am older than either of you, and being personal friends, permit me to give you a little advice.' 'Sail on, Senator,' said I. 'Well,' he continued, 'I discovered in the city of Paris that horseradish was a perfect destroyer of virility and I warn you never to use it.' The three of us laid down our forks of the dreadful weed in silent astonishment, until old Van Trumpler shouted, 'My God! I knew something was the matter with me!' Of course we smiled at his innocence, but since then we have foresworn harseradish."

The conversation continued for over an hour, but the remainder of the anecdotes, while very entertaining, were not of a character to stand reproduction in a household newspaper. Gen. Craig returns to his home in St. Joseph to-night.

THE FEDERAL COURT.

Business Suspended for the Summer—Tobacco Vendors in Trouble.

Judge Treat held a brief session of the United States District Court to-day, after which it was adjourned until July 11. Practically the business of the Federal Court is suspended for the summer. John O'Neill and Samuel W. Harding were hauled up before the court this morning for selling manufactured tobacco without a license. Pleas of guilty were entered in each case and personal recognizance taken for appearance at the next term of the court. Deputy Marshal Wheeler brought in from Ripley county, an old man named Ed. Bridges, a farmer, who was caught peddling tobacco without license, hauling it by wagons and flatboats to the Arkansas border. He was arrested upon a commissioner's warrant, and will have a hearing before United States Commissioner Shelby.

W. H. H. Russell entered a motion to quash the indictment against Dr. J. K. Alleon, on the ground that the book sent through the mails and complained of by the grand jury did not set forth any obscene, lewd or lascivious matter. The motion will be taken under advisement.

A Lumber Commission.

Thos. H. Peabody filed a suit to-day in the Circuit Court against E. H. Warner & S. M. Pearman, lumber commission dealers in the Granite Building. The case is entered in behalf of James Harreld, of Alto Pass, who alleges that he shipped a lot of material for beer kegs, staves, etc., for sale at this market, and that the business was not satisfactorily conducted by the commission firm. He wants judgment for $2,311 03.

JEFFERSON'S TOMB.

The Neglected Resting-Place of Virginia's Greatest Statesman.

"Gath" (Old Federalist) in Cin. Enquirer.

Charlottesville was in the vicinity of Jefferson's parentage and beginning. It has a romantic position among the ravelings of the Blue Ridge, on the swift river of Rivanna Gen. Jefferson married a widow, and found himself well-fixed in slaves and money. He began to build a house on the top of this hill, and it is of brick, with the musty and damp Virginia portico of classical columns, with wings, with a dome on the top, with theoretical bedrooms, a preposterous dancing hall, and a circle of stables and domestic apartments sweeping around in the rear—the whole occupying a large portion of the flattish summit of the mountain. He never had a good road up this mountain, and it must have been with pain and difficulty that he went up and came down so frequently, because huge rocks cross the road, and sometimes your carriage has to climb up as if it were going up the steps of a stair-case. The ascent of the mountain is probably five hundred feet, or more, and the road from the creek at the base winds around in a circle through a thick wood. About two-thirds of the way up you come to Jefferson's tomb, at the roadside—something of an imitation of Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon, though on a larger scale. It consists of a brick wall built to the height of eight or ten feet, inclosing a space, as I remember it, about thirty to fifty feet square. The front wall is opened, and a tall railing is set in it so as to allow the people to look through at the tomb.

The tomb looks like a couple of big Druid stones, hammered and injured by man and time. The boys from the University which Jefferson established in the town beneath have concluded that the best way to show their affection and admiration of Jefferson is to give a clip to the stone every time they drop a tear upon it. In this way they very nearly reproduce Jefferson's own system of making our institutions. He split and hammered away at the old Federal fabric till he got the edges jagged and displeasing and tolerably illegible; but fortunately the big stones put in by Madison, Hamilton, Livingston and Jay were allowed to stand. The inscription on this tomb was originally well chosen, though it is a eulogy of a second-rate man of great success on himself. He sets down the three things he did, which he thinks will most recommend him to posterity—drafting the Declaration of Independence—though he calls himself the author of the Declaration, which was the concurrent work of the Continental Congress and the people; the second thing is very creditable to him, namely, destroying the old English Church system in Virginia, which he did during the Revolutionary War itself, while the people were hot against England; thirdly, he speaks of himself as the father of the University of Virginia, which is true, though the money came from many a source, and from public sources, too.

As I stood by this monument, knowing that the statesman wrote the inscription himself, I thought of the inscription on Shakspeare's tomb. He did not say; "William Shakspeare, the Most Successful Manager of His Time; Author of Hamlet; Creator of the British Stage and Literature." He absorbed himself into the simple life of man, and merely asked that his bones be left alone. The Virginia Shakspeare, as he may be called by some, wrote out his own glories, and had them set into stone, it has been years since anybody could read the record, as the boys of his own creation had so vandalized the tomb; and they kept chip-chip-chipping at it till chipping got to be the order of the day and Virginia chipped in with the rebellion and lost her entire wealth, which was in negroes. The tomb of Shakspeare remains as it was made. The bones in it are protected. But the bones of Mr. Jefferson are as boldly demanded for a speculation in a cemetery company as if it was nobody's interest to preserve them in Virginia. Not long ago, if I mistake not, Congress was asked to put up a tomb to Jefferson—a matter certainly belonging to the State of Virginia, if it is so particular on the subject. We have not forgotten the disgraceful speculation that went on in Washington's bones for years by his successors at Mount Vernon. How they were refused to the United States Capitol, which was originally built with the idea of receiving them, because they afforded an income to the proprietor, and almost everything belonging to Washington was raked up and sold in different batches.

I have been to the tombs of many of the Virginia statesmen. Madison has, on the whole, the most respectable. His tomb is a small monument, containing merely the word "Madison." It stands in his father's burial-place, in a field of the great lawn confronting Montpelier. When Jefferson died he was very poor in money, though he was very sensitive to his posthumous fame; and the book called "Anas," which he printed late in life, was a tolerable small act of resentment for an old man, who, though his party had retained possession of the country so long, never felt satisfied that the principles of Hamilton would not some day arise and smile upon his long-lived rival. The tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon, when I saw it last, contained the name of some private marble-cutter, who had given the marble coffin, cut upon it in raised letters, as conspicuous as if the stone-cutter were Washington himself.

WHITE HOUSE STYLE.

How President Arthur's Codfish Aristocracy Crops Out--His Appetite.

Washington Letter to Cleveland Herald.

President Arthur pays attention to every little detail of household decoration. He continually wants this or that article of furniture shifted about to change the appearance of things. He is particular even to the exact angle at which the corner pieces of furniture rest, and on Mondays, when the rules he has made for the White House exclude visitors, it is his custom to inspect the house throughout and see that everything is in order. A reception is apt to leave some things topsy-turvy. Inquisitive people often like to study the upholstery, perhaps, and they forget to replace the shams. The shelf ornaments may take their fancy, and they sometimes fail to restore things to the condition in which they were left at the dictation of the President's æsthetic taste.

In this democratic age! few people are aware of the grandeur to be seen in the home of the chief ruler of the nation. The state dining-room is the room in which the President entertains at table the distinguished guests. No matter whom it may be he is entertaining, the President is always served first. He sits at the center of one side of the long table, his wife, if he be married, directly opposite him. It sometimes happens that the Secretary of State will be seated in the chair usually assigned to the President's wife. After the President has been served, White House etiquette requires that the lady sitting next the President on his right, and then the lady on his left, be served before any others. Then the President's wife is waited upon, and afterward the gentlemen immediately on her right and left in the order named. Then the other guests follow. Whenever the table is set for a dinner the large brass plateau which extends for sixteen feet along the table, which was imported from France during the administration of President Monroe, is filled with fruits, flowers and French candies. In the center, directly in front of the President, is placed a full-rigged floral ship, which was sent to President Garfield at the time of the last inauguration by a Boston florist. The flowers are renewed from the White House conservatory. When the chandeliers and candelabra are lighted and other effects produced to heighten the scene the spectator is apt to think of the regal festivities of some other land than free America.

Across the wide hall or corridor which extends from the east room to the large plant conservatory at the west end of the house, I was shown into the private dining-room of the President. There I saw the handsome buffet and sideboard which Mrs. Hayes had made during her stay in the White House. The buffet was ornamented with pretty platters and finished from designs of Theodore Davis, the New York artist. The scene depicted upon each dish suggests a story of some kind. In the drawers of the sideboard is kept the White House silver ware. The gold spoons which President Van Buren purchased are still here. They are said to have defeated him when he ran a second time for the Presidency. Some of the silverware I saw Crump said was seventy years old, and the side tables in the room have done duty for sixty-four years. The President often entertains his company in this private dining-room. Then the upper gas jets are lighted, and the eight candelabra, four of silver and four of brass, are distributed on the table and about the room, the reflectors all being so colored as to impart a deep rosy tint to the scene. Sixteen pounds of candles are used to carry out this system of lighting by candelabra.

It may be of interest to some people to know the hours meals are served at the White House. During Hayes' administration breakfast was served at 8:30 o'clock, lunch at 1 and dinner at 6. When Gen. Garfield became the host the hours were [an Ohio idea] changed. Breakfast was ready at 7:30, dinner at 3 and tea at 7. President Arthur is not regular as to any meal except dinner, which is served at 8 o'clock in the evening [a metropolitan idea]. He is not an early riser, and it is not unusual for his breakfast to be as late as 10:30 o'clock. A cup of coffee is always relished by him at this meal. He rarely resigns himself to slumber till 3 or 4 in the morning, and five or six hours are all he requires for rest. How he maintains good health under the heavy strain of so many hours' activity is a question that troubles friends. He is fond of the delicacies of the season, and his table is not the least expensive of the various drafts upon his purse.

Ham. Griffin's New Yacht.

New York Special to Chicago Times.

Miss Mary Anderson's steam yacht, the Galatea, was successfully launched at McGiehan's shipyard, Pamrapo, N. J., May 31. Several relatives and friends of the actress saw the launch. At 5:30 the signal was given by the builder and the yacht was let down the ways into the water. The engines were then opened, and gracefully as a swan the Galatea sped off toward Staten Island. There were no ceremonies, except that Dr. Griffin's pretty golden-haired daughter Blanche named the yacht on behalf of her sister, who was absent. The Galatea is one of the prettiest boats of her class. She is fifty-two feet long, ten feet six inches beam, three feet draft. Her engines are twenty-two horse power, compound condensing. It is expected that her rate of speed will be sixteen miles an hour.

CONNECTED with Messrs. Rogers, Peet & Co.'s vast clothing emporium, in New York, is Mr. E. Church, who resides at 207 Rodney street, Brooklyn. Recently speaking of St. Jacobs Oil Mr. Church said: "I used St. Jacobs Oil for a severe case of Rheumatism, and found it a sure and pleasant cure. In fact, the oil is found in my house at all times; we would not be without it, and whenever I see any one suffering from aches and pains, rheumatic or otherwise, I simply say, use St. Jacobs Oil and be cured.

Fashion in Roses.

From the New York Sun.

"The fashionable flower for the past season was the rose," said the veteran seedman, Peter Henderson, "and I never knew such prices to be paid for roses. The older sorts, such as the Safrano, the Douglas, and the Isabella Sprunt, are yet grown, but they are giving way to what are popularly called fancy roses, such as Perle des Jardins. But those for which the highest prices have recently been paid are the hybrid perpetual roses, particularly the variety known as the Magna Charta. But the costliest rose this year has been the Baroness Rothschild. It has no fragrance, but is a beautiful flower. Buds of this rose I have sold to retailers for $1 each, and the retailers made a handsome profit. They were scarce, for as yet they are rarely forced to flower early. For single corsage bouquets for an evening party last winter as much as $20 and $25 was paid. These hybrid perpetuals will, I think, soon be supplanted in popular favor by a newer class known as hybrid tea roses, of which the Duches of Edinburgh (bright crimson), La France (light pink), the Duke of Connaught (scarlet), the Duchess of Connaught (deep carmine), and the Coquette des Alpes (white), are at present types."

LIEBIG MALT EXTRACT.

RECOMMENDED BY PHYSICIANS of the highest eminence on both sides of the Atlantic, as an invaluable Tonic and Restorative in cases of General Debility, Nervous Depression, Enfeebled Constitution and Female Weakness.

NURSING MOTHERS, who suffer from poverty of milk, will find it a specific for their troubles. It stimulates the digestion, sharpens the appetite, invigorates and builds up the entire system, and excites a generous flow of milk.

WEAK AND SICKLY CHILDREN, who suffer from lassitude and weariness, the result of disease, over-study, or nervous strain, will derive substantial benefit from its use. It restores the system to its normal condition and brings back the bloom of youth.

INVALIDS AND CONVALESCENTS will find it admirably adapted for sustaining life, and restoring lost strength. When the stomach is weak and refuses other nourishment the Extract will prove an excellent substitute for food. It neither palls upon the appetite nor offends the taste.

DELICATE FEMALES, who suffer from the weaknesses of their sex, will derive lasting relief from its use. It improves the digestion, purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, and revives the spirits.

WEAK AND DELICATE PERSONS GENERALLY, who require some artificial restorative—and especially those who are inclined to Consumption—will find this preparation exactly suited to their needs. It is a specific for the Coughs and Nervous Affections usually incident to a low state of the system.

AS A FLESH RESTORER it possesses the highest value. The whole tendency of its action is to stimulate the digestion of fat-producing foods, and its effect is invariably to give fullness and roundness to the female form, and robustness to the masculine frame.

THE LIEBIG MALT EXTRACT is a pure concentrated Fluid Extract of Malt, agreeable to the taste, and free from alcohol. It is readily retained on the stomach and contains none but wholesome and nourishing ingredients. The genuine preparation bears on the label a fine engraved likeness of BARON VON LIEBIG, and a FAC-SIMILE of his Signature, as well as that of A. VOGELER & CO., BALTIMORE, MD., Sole Agents for America.

JOSEPH PULITZER,
President of the Dispatch Publishing Co.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this fifth day of June, 1882.

{SEAL}

I. J. KAPPNER,
Notary Public City of St. Louis.
Commission expires July 7, 1885.

FIVE hundred delegates attended the recent Greenback Convention in Iowa. This is WEAVER'S State, and school-houses are scarce in some sections of it.

S. W. DORSEY, the distinguished Star-Router, is negotiating for a magnificent residence in Denver. He should pull his hat over his eyes and go farther West.

THE Democrats out in Oregon attribute their recent defeat to the managers of the Northern Pacific Railway. We presume that the Democratic statesmen in the close States will be afraid to shake their fingers at the big monopolists now.

MR. BLAINE, of Maine, and a number of associate capitalists, have been visiting Ohio and inspecting their gigantic coal and iron possessions. We presume all the great Capitalists of the country are heartily in favor of BLAINE for President.

THE sharp faro firm which dropped $13,000 in St. Louis this week and was closed up by the POST-DISPATCH Thursday night, before it had an opportunity to recoup its losses, will leave town with the impression that this is a cold and an unfeeling world.

UP to this time the lecturing tour of Mrs. JESSE JAMES and her children has proven a flat financial failure. The show only drew $10 in this city last night. Dr. CRITTENDEN, if well advertised, could draw a better house here at any time.

IN addition to a full supply of burglars' tools, fuses, torpedoes, dark lanterns and whisky, the Brookfield robbers had in their den one hundred blood-curdling ten-cent novels. Rum and ten-cent romances are the natural stimulants of crime in this country.

THE Powers seem to be meditating the singular expedient of giving ARABI BEY a piece of advice. If ARABI had taken all the advice which has been given him, without money and without price, in the last two years, he would now be an inmate of at least half a dozen insane asylums.

A FEW more days of this kind of weather will start a grand exodus for the mountains and the watering-places. Citizens of St. Louis, before departing for the summer, should leave orders to have the POST-DISPATCH forwarded to them. We publish all the local news about a half day ahead of our talented morning contemporaries.

IN the midst of his tribulations it must be a solace to Mr. R. C. PATE, of this city, to find his portrait in the National Police Gazette in connection with a sketch describing him as a "Famous Horseman." This is a delicate reference, we presume, to Mr. P.'s connection with those mythical horse-races so well patronized a short time ago by negro barbers and discarded serving-men.

THE New York Sun heads its telegram in reference to the return of Mr. CURTIS, the hero of the CURTIS-DIXON scandal, to St. Louis: "A Glimpse at Western Manners and Morals." They do not love and elope and practice bigamy, pigamy and trigonometry in the cultivated East. Still, the revelations in the MALLEY trial in New Haven might, by a stretch of imagination, be called a glimpse at Eastern manners and morals.

THE ungallant Kansas City Times objects to the appointment of Miss PHŒBE COUZINS as a member of the Utah Commission for the reason that she doesn't know anything about being married once, and is, therefore, incompetent to deal with the complicated matrimonial system of the Mormons. PHŒBE is an intelligent woman, and she knows how to sympathize with a sister who has only one-half or one-tenth of a husband, as the case may be.

A WISCONSIN firm has just closed a contract for a patent process for the manufacture of whisky from the smoke of burning wood, and a $25,000 plant is being laid down for the distillery at Bernawood, in Shawnee county. It is claimed that six gallons of whisky can be obtained from one cord of wood. This will probably supplant the old method by which the "sperrits" were made entirely of quinine, cigar stubs and dishwater.

DR. CRITTENDEN is delighted with the prompt manner in which the citizens of Linn and Adair counties turned out and captured the Brookfield bank robbers. He has telegraphed his congratulation all around and has expressed the hope that the robbers will all be speedily tried and convicted. Since he was made a Doctor of Laws the Governor has shown unusual respect for the statutes. If the Brookfield robbers had all been shot and killed in the pursuit it is altogether likely that he would have written a deprecatory address.

IT must be a cheerful thing to be a Mahommedan newspaper reader in Bombay. A late issue of the Kosid-e-Mumbae, the Mussulman organ of that presidency, calls attention to the fact that there is to be an eclipse of the sun on the 17th of the month, which is to cause a famine in Ireland and a rebellion in that island on the 9th of November. A big lot of gunpowder will be used in England, the enemies of Turkey are to be victorious and there will be a new ruler in Cabul. This beats the POST-DISPATCH. We will candidly admit right here that, although we were aware of the eclipse, we had not for a moment expected that it had any fell intentions of this sort upon Ireland or Cabul. In future eclipses will be scrutinized much more closely.

IT is either in the copy-book or in some other equally reliable collection of apothegms that we learn to "Respect Yourself, That Others May Respect You." Harmless and even moral as this norm appears, it has been the cause of infinite trouble, great loss and much anguish of mind and body to Mr. THOS. J. ARCHER, of Cardington, Ohio. Mr. ARCHER is a colored citizen, but in taking an inventory of his personality, in the light of the Fifteenth Amendment and the Statutes of Ohio, he saw no reason why he should not be called Mr. ARCHER by his acquaintances. To maintain his title to this honorable designation he pledged his life, his fortune and his sacred honor, and in less than a week he was involved in a personal difficulty with every able male white citizen within a radius of six miles of Cardington. People would not allude to him as "Mister" ARCHER, and he declined to be otherwise alluded to, and the consequence was that at the close of a little meeting which occurred in Cardington the other day, three frivolous palefaces were shot by the dignified darkey. A mob collected and would have lynched "Mr." ARCHER had not the Sheriff spirited him away, and accordingly the crowd turned its attention to "Mr." ARCHER'S farm-house, barn and hay, all of which they burned. The end of this dark and bloody "Mr."y is not yet.

A SUPPRESSED EVIL.

So far as the suppression of public gambling in this city is concerned it may now be written that it is un fait accompli. For years a conflict has been going on between the professional gamesters and the law in this municipality. There has been much corruption, defamation, scandal and heart-burning, but, aided and assisted by unscrupulous attorneys and yielding officials, the gamblers have at all times been able to defy the statutes and openly pursue their demoralizing vocation. To-day a few transitory followers of the fickle goddess may spread their nets in the quiet rooms of a great caravansary until hunted down by the argus-eyed press, but gambling as a trade is at an end in St. Louis. The ancient halls which have echoed to the rattle of the ivory chips and the voice of the keno manipulator for many years are as silent and as voiceless these days as the mountain dells where brooks are born. To parapharse from LONGFELLOW'S "Monte Cassino:"

The silence of these places is like a sleep,
So full of rest they seem; each passing tread
Is a reverberation from the deep
Recesses, of the ages that are dead.

For this desirable metamorphosis we are indebted to the JOHNSON Law and the pluck, talent, honesty and indomitable will of Circuit Attorney HARRIS, who lies to-day on a bed of sickness as the penalty for his zeal. When the JOHNSON Law went into effect, the gamblers, acting upon the advice of counsellors skilled in the intricacies of statute laws, treated it precisely as they had treated all other legislation designed to curb their personal privileges. They, perhaps, believed honestly that the very severity of the law would defeat its purpose. They had excellent authority for believing that it was in contravention of the Constitution of the State. At all events, aided by an indifferent police administration, they ignored the law, and when the time came they went into the courts to test its constitutionality. Mr. WILLIAM PATRICK, an able lawyer and a sincere, conscientious man—differing in every respect conceivable from the mercenary professors of the law who live off the gamblers and form segments of their corrupting rings—took hold of the question in an independent, manly way, and dealt with it purely as a constitutional issue. He presented a strong, analytical as well as incisive argument against the law, but in the end the Supreme Court overruled the only point which seemed to catch the profound intellect of the lower court, and to-day the law stands in all its force and majesty. The gamblers have accepted the result. They have bowed their heads in submission and are now kneeling at the seat of mercy.

The POST-DISPATCH, as a firm, unswerving friend of public morality and decency, congratulates the community upon this result, and it takes unto itself a reasonable amount of credit for bringing it about. It congratulates the fathers and mothers of wayward boys and the wives of dissipated husbands that the doors of the gambling dens are at last barred to those whose feet are inclined to "take hold on hell." Above all it congratulates the city that the insidious influences which corrupt officials and bring disgrace and scandal upon courts and police authorities have been effectually suppressed. Of course we have in our midst reputable people whose callings are temporarily depressed, who will claim that the stopping of gambling is an injury to the city. They will demonstrate that hotels, tailor shops, restaurants and hack-stands are benefitted by open gambling and the free-handed distribution of money which is always indulged by the winners and the prosperous professionals. Men are found who affect to believe that country merchants will cease coming to St. Louis because they can't find sufficient opportunities to gamble and dissipate. This is not only a reflection on a worthy class of people, but the idea is thoroughly fallacious. All forms of public knavery have found open defenders who based their arguments on the needs of the public. It was said that the TWEED Ring was necessary to improve and beautify New York City; that the Star Routes were needed to develop and build up the sparsely-settled West; that the old Whisky Ring was an indispensable, money-producing adjunct to the Republican party. There never was a great wrong that did not have an interested defender. In a very short time it will be found that a city can prosper and expand without public gambling, and men will be ashamed to admit that they ever encouraged or countenanced such an evil. The successful enforcement of the JOHNSON law is simply the triumph of Right, and we say this without using the phrase in any cant sense. It is a victory which belongs to the moral and intelligent elements of society. While there is, perhaps, no feeling of resentment against the misguided gamblers who are to-day in the toils—for the law seeks no vengeance—there is certainly a sense of relief and thankfulness in nearly every household that gambling has been throttled in St. Louis. When the gamblers have been punished, have adjusted themselves to the new order of things and have discovered that there is no longer need for them to secure protection through dabbling in politics and corrupting officers, the first substantial benefit from the services so nobly rendered by Circuit Attorney HARRIS will be felt and recognized.

THE COMING COALITION.

From interviews with leading St. Louis Republicans to-day it will be observed that the proposition to have the Republicans of Missouri adopt and indorse the Greenback State ticket meets with considerable favor. All indications point now to the adoption of this policy. We confess that we are rather anxious to see the experiment tried. So far as the Greenbackers are concerned, there is no danger that they will be able to put their foolish and fallacious financial doctrines into effect, even though they should find their rather respectable ticket elected in Missouri. The country is too intelligent for that sort of nonsense. The Grenbackers represent a feeling of discontent with both political parties. This is a sort of off year in politics. There is no Governor or President to be voted for, and it is really desirable that we should know the exact size of the Democratic majority in the State. There is a legend that when strained it amounts to about 80,000. Some really intelligent people hold that it is 50,000, while well-informed politicians affirm that on a clean, square issue the Democrats can't muster 20,000 majority. It would not only be a great relief but a satisfaction to know the exact figures. A coalition between the Republicans and Greenbackers would be likely to reveal the true state of affairs. If it should turn out that the Democratic margin was only about ten thousand the effect would be good. The fever of the rampant Stalwart or Confederate element would be allayed. The party would be managed with more skill and intelligence. The "Roaring Ralph Stackpoles" from the Bitter Creek section would be calmed and persuaded to take back seats in the party councils. Better tickets would be nominated and more careful legislation would follow. A party with a giant's strength of 50,000 majority is likely to use the power in a reckless, tyrannous, indiscreet way. The Democratic party of Missouri would be a highly respectable, conservative and sensible organization if it had to struggle for its existence, or, rather, work for its living. The belief that there is a backing of fifty or eighty thousand majority behind it leads to indifference for the public weal and begets much demoralization. A strict party census is really necessary, and it looks now as though the Republicans and Greenbackers would provide a method for securing it.

OUR LOCAL POET.

The Rev. GEORGE A. WATSON, who is curate of the Church of the Holy Name in North St. Louis, is a poet of no mean ability. He has already published several brochures which created a flutter of excitement in the reading world, but his last poem, entitled "St. Louis, the Future Great," will doubtless cause a veritable literary sensation when it is generally circulated. The poem, which the reverend Father very modestly calls a "piece," is printed in pamphlet form and is a pæan to the greatness of St. Louis. The poem is replete with startling and beautiful imagery, and the current of the verse rolls on like a majestic river through banks embroidered with the daisy and the golden rod. He says:

From China's flow'ry Kingdom, this important order quickly came:
"Send us four hundred thousand boxes of th' electric, purest flame,
And then, shall all th' applauding nations, your eternal praise proclaim.

It is all very well for Father WATSON to praise St. Louis, but we ask him if it is fair or right for him to brand Chicago, our sister city, with such scathing and bitter vituperation as this:

Our ancient annals speak about Chicago, honest Traders' bane,
Were branded on their unprotected backs, the diff'rent grades of grain,
Her people were surprising good, most queerly honest, and profane.

We ask Father WATSON how can he reconcile such an atrocious charge against a body of men who certainly have never been convicted of embezzlement and forgery with the charitable and forgiving sermons which he preaches so well? Of course he shows his knowledge of his weakness here, and he goes on to propitiate the press thus:

Republic stately, POST-DISPATCH, and fiery Democratic Globe,
With Dixie's snow white cotton, and Saint Louis matchless, silken robe,
Send us. Forget not Santa Fe's unequaled useful, cheap adobe.

But we tell the reverend Father that this will not do. None could be more sensible than we of the proud position in the niche of fame which mention in an immortal poem like this gives us, but we must blame this uncalled-for, this totally unjustifiable attack on the unoffending merchants of Chicago. Father WATSON should recollect that the war is over, that sister cities should dwell together in unison and love, and will he pretend to say, knowing humanity, that Chicago can either forget or forgive such a bitter sarcasm as his? Our indignation over this impassioned onslaught on an unoffending and unprepared community must not blind us to the superb beauty of the close of the poem. Here is the dramatic manner in which the story climaxes, as it were, in a burst of lurid horror:

It was a hazy, listless, dull November, sleep-inducing day,
A lurid glare, high over house and Marble street, portentious lay,
A mournful, thrice repeated signal, showed the flames in dread array.

Like thunder roar, the master fire exterminator of the age,
Aloft, a tidal wave, hurled over highest dome. The flames, they rage
Around the Council Hall, misfortune to famed Future Great, presage.

Augmented much, th' advancing flames increase, the Golden Gate they reach;
Flames sweep from North to South, from East to West, in wildest fury each,
Terrific falls the Golden Gate, the God of Heav'n we now beseech.

The Future Great, what Hero's arm can save, the universal cry,
From far horizon's farthest, utmost verge, a wondrous flame swept by,
From it emerged a man, with whose behest the raging flames comply.

Exhausted now, relentless fury spent, the dazzling Hero's crown,
They cannot hear, much less Crusader's fierce restraining, deadly frown,
A deal'ning shout went up for Sainted Louis, of Crusade renown.

THERE is one newspaper man in the country who is very proud of himself. It is Mr. HENRY W. GRADY, of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution. The other day a couple hundred of the best citizens of the State sent him a card urging him to become a candidate for Congressman-at-Large. The noble editor man published the card and appended to it a long reply, in which he took occasion to decline the honor with a heart overflowing with thankfulness. Among other things he said:

When I was eighteen years of age I adopted journalism as my profession. After thirteen years of service, in which I have had various fortunes, I can say that I have never seen a day when I regretted my choice. On the contrary, I have seen the field of journalism so enlarged, its possibilities so widened and its influence so extended that I have come to believe earnestly that no man—no matter what his calling, his elevation or his opportunity—can equal in dignity, honor and usefulness the journalist who comprehends his position, fairly measures his duties and gives himself entirely and unselfishly to his work. But journalism is a jealous profession, and demands the fullest allegiance of those who seek its honors or its emoluments. Least of all things can it be made the aid of the demagogue, or the handmaid of the politician. The man who uses his journal to subserve his political ambition or writes with a sinister and personal purpose soon loses his power and had best abandon the profession he has betrayed. Within my memory there are frequent and striking examples of men who have sacrificed the one profession only to be sacrificed in the other. History has not recorded the name of a single man who has been great enough to succeed in both. Therefore, devoted as I am to my profession—believing, as I do, that there is more of honor and usefulness for me along its way than in any other path, and that my duty is clear and is unmistakable—I am constrained to reaffirm in my own mind and to declare to you the resolution I made when I entered journalism, viz: that as long as I remained in its ranks I would never become a candidate for any political office, or draw a dollar from any public treasury. This rule I have never broken, and I hope I never shall.

Following up these magnificent sentiments Mr. GRADY remarked further to his worshipping, admiring friends that his sole ambition was to see a better and a grander Georgia—"a Georgia that has filled the destiny God intended her for—when her towns and cities are hives of industry and her countrysides the exhaustless fields from which their stores are drawn—when every stream dances on its way to the music of spindles and every forest echoes back the roar of a passing train—when her valleys smile with abundant harvests and from her hillsides come the tinkling of bells as her herds and flocks go forth from their folds—when more than two million people proclaim her perfect independence and bless her with their love." After all this has been accomplished he says that he will be happy and content if his son can cast his eye over the scene and say, "My father bore a part in this work and his name lives in the memory of this people." Mr. GRADY seems to be a very fine article of editor. We believe we do not press the limit too severely when we say that we are quite too sublimely and consumedly proud of him too.

THE readjustment of salaries in the Public School Library is a reform which is certainly demanded by the facts in the case. The Chief Assistant, who is practically the Librarian, gets $1,100 a year, about one-half the salary of a good hotel cook; about one-third the pay of a good crockery peddler. He is expected to be a thorough litterateur, a thorough bibliopole, a generally and generously educated gentleman, all for $1,100 a year. As a matter of actual fact the best work and the most intelligent work which has ever been done in the Library has been performed by Mr. SPAMER, and the Library Committee will be displaying their good judgment by a proper recognition of his valuable services. The Public School Library is an institution which is every year becoming a more valuable one to the public. The committee, in the interest of education, should mark its appreciation of the skill and judgment with which the great advance of the last year has been secured.

AT three o'clock this afternoon the CORNYN monument in Calvary Cemetary will be unvailed with all the pomp and ceremony which should attend this tardy honor to the dead soldier. Col. FLORENCE N. CORNYN'S was a name to conjure with in Missouri twenty years ago. He was a peculiar combination of the enthusiast and the cavalier. Brave beyond the bounds of rashness, he was as tender as a woman when his sympathies were touched. A hard fighter, and an evangel of the gospel of freedom to black as well as to white, he went into the war and battled for an idea. He was too thoroughly the victim of conviction ever to rise to high command. He was too deadly honest and earnest to make lasting friendships with the men who distributed power and place. But around his grave to-day there will be eyes dimmed and hearts weighted with sympathy for the dead, who lived and died a man who loved his fellow men.

THE Republican leaders in Washington are encouraged to believe that the triumph of their party in Oregon means a tidal wave for them. The exposure of the Republican Star Route thieves ought to offset a little victory like that.

THE strike of the iron-workers at Cincinnati is over. The men go to work next Monday. Matters here are not in a fair way to adjustment, we regret to say.

PERSONAL.

—Garibaldi was buried in a red shirt. The family of the deceased patriot evidently had their ideas as to where he was bound.

—Mr. F. D. Millet, the artist, will spend most of the summer making a tour of Scotland, keeping pen and pencil busy meanwhile.

—Count de Lesseps, who is now in his seventy seventh year, was presented a few days ago by his young wife with another child—the tenth.

—The Melancholy Club, of New York, celebrated Walt Whitman's birthday last week. Poets are gradually getting to be appreciated by the right kind of people.

—The aggregate ages of a couple married at Winchester, Ky., the other day, amounted to 147 years. The groom is 77 and the bride 70. "Ask somebody older than me."

—Alexander III. has recently presented to the Emperor of Germany four horses, two of which are, it is said, the very ones that drew the late Czar's carriage when he was assassinated.

—Garibaldi's burial was in consonance with his life. A storm was raging on the little island of Caprera when his body was laid to the only rest it ever knew. He was the stormy petrel of the universal sea.

—Richard Wagner will never again visit England, because he thinks that the antipathy manifested toward him in London years ago was "based upon the peculiar character of the English religion, having more affinity with the Old than the New Testament."

—Ex-Secretary of the Navy Robeson made a speech in Congress Wednesday severely criticising the management of the navy during the last six years. It is understood that a section of Mr. Robeson's cheek will hereafter be used for target purposes whenever heavy guns are to be tested.

—An Italian paper alluded to Darwin as "the apostle of monkeys," and spoke sneeringly of his work. This is very unkind, because, if monkeys and hand-organs were to be abolished, it would be a race to see which poor-house a good many of the sons of sunny Italy would get to first.

—Miss Susan Willis Fletcher, the Spiritualist who has just served a term of imprisonment in England upon the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, is now in this country, and lectured in Philadelphia on Sunday. She is described as a little below the medium height and of prepossessing appearance, with a masculine face and pleasant style of oratory.

Bad Street Railway Management.

ST. LOUIS, June 9.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please give space in your fearless paper for right and truth and justice to the public. I think it is about time that our City Fathers were compelling street car companies to comply with their charters. For instance, the Cass avenue car line takes its passengers to Grand and St. Louis avenues, dumps them off to await their chance to get on a so-called extension car or walk nine blocks. To-day a picnic patronized that road and part of the people were treated the same way. A two-horse car unloaded, and half of them had to wait there in the sun until another car came. On Sundays hundreds of men and boys go out on that track to play ball west of the Fair Grounds, and, sir, it would surprise you to see the way they pack on those one-horse cars from the so-called junction out to the Fair Grounds gate. Now, sir, thousands of people would go out on that line that don't, if they had any accommodation in the running of their cars. Can't you sift this thing to the bottom and do the public a great favor?

An Opening for a Smoke Consumer.

ST. LOUIS, June 8.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Now that Col. Chas. G. Stifel is building a new malt-house on the corner of Fourteenth and Howard streets, we, his neighbors, would be glad to hear that he will be as eager as he always is to forward the interest of the public. We suppose that in connection with this new building he will have furnace and boilers, creating a great deal of smoke. This, added to the smoke already vomited from his establishment, would be suffocating. Now these smoke stacks equipped with good smoke consumers would be a blessing to the neighbors and a good trial for the Flad or some other smoke consumer. Try it.

Banking in Missouri.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The bank at Brookfield, Mo., was entered by a band of robbers last Wednesday, and a pistol held at the cashier's head while he delivered $6,000 in currency to his visitors. Next to keeping out of the way of a Chicago cable-car the running of a Missouri bank seems to be about the most hazardous occupation that this country affords.

Thurman Looming Up.

There are symptoms of the red bandanna in Ohio politics. The whole country would salute the well known gonfalon—if we may be allowed some margin in searching around for a real nice word.

THE CIRCUIT ATTORNEY.

Mr. Harris Rapidly Improving—Plans for a Trip to Recuperate.

Circuit Attorney Harris is considerably improved this morning over his condition of yesterday. It was feared that the slight fever which attacked him early in the morning would prove something serious, but all apprehensions were dispelled later in the day when the fever disappeared and left the patient better if anything. Last night he enjoyed a prolonged and refreshing slumber which lasted at least seven hours. The relations and friends are now planning a tour of rest and recreation for Mr. Harris so soon as he is able to travel. From the present indications this will be in about ten days or two weeks at the furthest. Every symptom of the patient is now favorable and unless some totally unforeseen phase is met he will be strong enough to undergo the fatigue of the trip. It is the intention that he, accompanied by Mrs. Harris and Mrs. MacAdam, his sister, will go from this city to Chicago, where the party will take the steamer and go around the lake to Detroit, where they will remain for some little time. From Detroit they will proceed to Orangeville, in Canada, the home of Mrs. MacAdam, where Mr. and Mrs. Harris will remain until the former has fully regained his wonted strength.

OVERBECK EXONERATED.

Sheriff Mason Investigates the Charges, Which are Withdrawn.

Sheriff Mason this morning before repairing to his office proceeded to investigate Deputy-Sheriff Oberbeck's course with regard to the warrant for the arrest of Robert Heitz on the charge of embezzling from his employer. The Sheriff called upon the young man's employer, Mr. Wuslacuk, the safe manufacturer, who said: "Your deputy is not at all to blame in this matter. I take the entire responsibility for it. An arrangement was made to compromise and save Heitz from disgrace. I consented to it, and so informed your deputy. The matter is dropped and the losses will be made good." The Sheriff on such a report at once exonerated Overbeck, but blamed him for omitting to report to his son, Mr. Chas. Mason, who has charge of the Sheriff's business at the Four Courts. Heitz did not go across the river to evade the arrest.

A Series of Accidents.

Yesterday afternoon while out gunning in the Forest Park Look Out Grove on Clayton road and King's highway, a young man named Joe Wallace accidentally shot himself through the left shoulder. He was using a rifle in target practice and after shooting for a time went into a saloon near by and called for some lunch at the same time leaning his left arm on the gun. By some inadvertent movement the gun exploded striking him as mentioned. A doctor was called who pronounced the wound a very serious one. Wallace lives with Louis Huber on the King's Highway.

Last night about 11 o'clock John H. Brudex had his right leg broken in two places between the ankle and knee. Brudex and two other men had been out on a spree all the evening, and were about finishing their orgies in a saloon on Chouteau and Compton avenues when the three engaged in a drunken wrestling bout with the above result. A doctor was called who set the limb, after which the man was sent to his home in the neighborhood.

Yesterday afternooon while Mrs. Johanna Dickman was at the Fair Grounds with a pleasure party she accidentally fell down the stairs of the amphiteater, sustaining severe bruises. She was taken to her home, No. 2112 Franklin avenue, by her friends.

At half past eight o'clock last evening a five-year-old boy named August Hollman, while playing in the street was run over by a butcher's cart belonging to John Nick, who keeps a stand in Biddle street Market. The horse was driven by a boy named Fred. Bower, and the accident was probably the resit of carelessness on his part. The injured boy was picked up and taken to his home in the rear of No. 1114 North Fourteenth street, and a doctor called.

Yesterday a team of horses belonging to Mrs. Mary Goodfellow, and driven by a man named Lewis Cook, ran away from Broadway and Carr street to Biddle street, where they were caught. The driver was thrown out and considerably bruised.

REGATTA PRIZES.

The E. Jaccard Jewelry Company, Fifth and Olive Streets,

Have now on exhibition thirty-one gold medals designed and made by them for the Mississippi Valley Amateur Rowing Association, to be awarded as prizes at their coming annual regatta. These medals are made from original designs and are quite unique, being an artistic grouping of the various implements used in boating into the form of a beautiful badge.

Oarsmen and the public generally are invited to inspect them.

Cady's Court.

But a small amount of business was transacted by his Honor Judge Cady to day in the Court of Correction. In the case of Aurora Hains, which was an appeal from the First District Police Court, where a fine of $100 had been assessed against her for keeping a disorderly house on South Fifth street, the appeal was dismissed with costs.

Laura Andrews, the respectable married lady who was last week sentenced to four months' imprisonment in the jail for stealing a very insignificant "black and tan" dog from Thomas Collins, made a motion for a new trial to-day, which was laid over until June 17. This was an unusual case. The dog in question came to Mrs. Andrews' house and she refused to give it up when Collins came for it unless he paid her a reward. She was arrested for the larceny of it and received the somewhat startling sentence of four months.

Charge Against a Waiter.

Henry Henderson is, or has been, employed by Joseph T. McCullough, proprietor of the House of Comfort at the Fair Grounds, as a waiter. Yesterday McCullough had Henderson arrested under a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He claims that Henderson has been in the habit of extorting money from customers when they patronized his place. When an order was given for ice cream, or anything else, Henderson would add a small amount to the regular price of the article, which he pocketed as a perquisite of his own. In this way he could accumulate from $1 to $2 a day and was doing a good business on his own hook, when the proprietor discovered the fraud. An officer presented the case to Acting Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Reed this morning, who declared that Henderson could not be prosecuted by McCullough, but by the customers, as they and not he were losers by the fraud of the former.

A Hoodlum Arrested.

Paul Musler, a 17-year-old hoodlum, belonging to what is known as the Mulberry gang, was arrested last night for being one of the three boys who broke a leg of Andrew McGee day before yesterday on the Leeve at the foot of Mulberry street, while trying to drive him away from the vicinity. McGee was waiting to get employment at unloading coal from a barge, and the hoodlums regarded this as an infringement on their rights. Musler was taken to the City Hospital, where he was identified by McGee as being one of the parties who assaulted him. The other two fellows will be caught to-day.

THE REPUBLICAN PLAN.

A Coalition With the Greenbackers a Certainty.

The Greenback Ticket to be Indorsed—A Call for a State Convention Demanded—What Prominent Republicans Say.

Since the Greenbackers met in State Convention at Moberly and presented a complete ticket for the suffrage of the people, considerable interest has been manifested concerning the attitude of the Republican party. Everywhere the voters is confronted with allegations that the ticket would be supported by every element opposed to Bourbon Democracy, and that a grand boom would be inaugurated in its favor. These facts have encouraged the Greenbackers to hope for success, and they are entering into the campaign with an energy not usually characteristic of the party. Since the Democratic plurality of 1880 was fixed at only 17,000, the opposition have been inspired by a rapidly growing prejudice against the Administration, a fresh influx of migratory voters and a prospect of a complete coalition that will tend to make the fall campaign a matter of considerable doubt. There is no question but that the party in power is subject to terrible arraignment. It only remains for those outside to take advantage of the opportunities presented and force the issue. In order to ascertain the sentiment of the straight Republicans on the subject of a union with the Greenbackers, a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH this morning called upon several prominent politicians, with whom he obtained interviews. The first gentleman called upon was the candidate for Governor against Crittenden, who said: "The tendency of Republicanism in Missouri is toward a unify and harmony of action with all the forces opposed to Bourbon rule. We feel that if all the elements of opposition were combined it would be a sorry day for the Democratic party of Missouri."

"What do you think of the Greenback State ticket?"

"Its personnel is good, and no fault can be found on that score. The only question with me is to what extent the Republicans may sacrifice themselves for the public good. The Greenbackers made the mistake of denouncing the Republican party equally with the Democracy. It will be impossible for us to subscribe to their platform, but no possible objection can be raised against their candidates."

"Do you favor an indorsement of the Greenback ticket?"

"I favor a calling of the Republican State Convention by the Republican State Committee, so that these questions of party policy may be canvassed by representatives from every portion of the State. I understand there is a sentiment in favor of letting the indorsement go by default. I am opposed to that movement. A convention should be called at the earliest possible date, and I stand ready to abide by whatever decision may then be agreed upon. If Mr. Filley does not desire a convention, his committee may throttle the movement, but in that event a great mistake will be committed, and there will be trouble. I must declare in advance that if such a policy is pursued the Republican party can not be rallied to anybody's support, and the whole scheme will result in failure. The 'possum policy can not extend beyond the State ticket either. Take the Springfield Congressional district, for instance. There we can scarcely afford to throw away the opportunities presented, and if the Greenbackers refuse to coalesce with us a triangular fight must result, with the advantages in favor of the Democracy. The long and short of it is that the Republicans are desirous of combining an opposition to the Democracy and of making a solid fight. We are pleased with the Greenback ticket, but a State convention must be called for the purpose of determining the extent to which a coalition may be mutually beneficial."

"Doesn't Mr. Filley own the committee?"

"He has an undoubted majority, but no man or set of men is authorized to speak for the Republican party of Missouri, and I shall make a firm demand for a State convention, whereby the interests of the party will be more certainly and soundly developed."

MR. GEO. H. SHIELDS

said he was certainly favorable to an endorsement of the Greenback ticket, if a Republican Convention said so, but that convention must be called immediately. He favored almost any policy that tended to free Missouri from its Bourbon misrule and place the Government again in the hands of men whose trusts would not be violated. He saw no objections to the Greenback ticket, and thought there were evidences of a desire to combine for its success. Mr. Shields did not incline to be talkative about the matter, and his conversation impressed the hearer with the belief that he would exert himself to secure a combination to almost any extent, whereby the Democracy might be overthrown and snowed under.

JOHN P. ELLIS

declared that, from his knowledge of the Greenback ticket, it could meet with no opposition but a political one. Judge Rice, he said, was a good fellow and a fine lawyer, thoroughly competent to assume the duties and functions of a Supreme Judge. The nominee for Railroad Commissioner, Judge Ritchey, is the son-in-law of Capt. C. B. McAfee, of Springfield, the law-partner of Gov. Phelps, and was known to be an honorable and upright man. "It requires no particular ability," said Mr. Ellis, "to be a Railroad Commissioner, anyhow."

The nominee for Superintendent of Public Schools, Mr. Booth, was unknowon to the gentleman, but nothing had been said to his detriment. Altogether the speaker favored the ticket, but would demand a convention of the Republican party in order that the organization might be preserved.

HON. JOHN B. HENDERSON

said it was scarcely the time to determine whether the Republicans should effect a coalition with the Greenbackers, but he favored almost any honest movement that would secure the ascendancy of the opposition.

G. A. Finkelnburg and Postmaster Hays were sought for to obtain their opinions, but the former had sailed for Europe and the latter could not be found.

BELLEVILLE.

Richard Thebus and Oliver Green, who were indicted for the robbery of Mrs. Gowosko, pleaded guilty and were sentenced to two years in the Pen.

Bernhard Gerling killed Bernhard Vohlkamp's dog and was fined $10 for the act before one of the Justices of Fayetteville. He appealed the case which is now being tried in the Circuit Court. Both parties have two lawyers and about fifty witnesses. When the case is decided the value of the dog will run up into the hundreds.

Blood spots mark the floor and furniture of the County Clerk's office, but those connected with the office seem in blissful ignorance of the manner in which the gore was spilled. About 1 o'clock yesterday John B. Bowman, ex-Mayor of East St. Louis, and Col. Kueffner, a prominent attorney of Belleville, met in the Clerk's office and as the gentlemen are inclined to pugilism and on unfriendly terms a quarrel ensued which terminated in a rough-and-tumble fight. Col. R. B. Halbert was the only eye witness to the affray with the exception of the Deputy Clerk, and as Mr. Halbert puts it being an ardent admirer and firm believer in the "Monroe doctrine," he declined to interfere between foreigners. Bowman was decidedly victorious, and as a proof of his prowess carried away a tuft of Col. Kueffner's hair, which is now on exhibition in the clerk's office. The belligerents ignored old established rules of pugilism, and cut an undignified figure in the scramble, neither making a reputation as a fighter. The difficulty grew out of the gas [illegible] in which both attorneys are interested. [illegible] endeavored to convince the other that he was no gentleman, and in the height of passion [illegible] was passed and the struggle [illegible]. Kueffner is one of the best attorneys in Belleville and is of a non-combative disposition. Bowman is also well known, his reputation being established during the turbulent times of '78-'79 in East St. Louis.

THE GAMBLING CASES.

Normile and Bliss Will Represent the State in the Criminal Court.

It is now positively decided that Col. Normile and United States District Attorney Bliss will appear for the State in the gambling cases, the first of which is docketed for trial in the Criminal Court for June 19. It is expected that the defendants will make a bold attempt for a continuance until the next term, but should this move be made the State will urge a trial as persistently as the defense will a continuance. The case of R. C. Pate is the fourth on the docket. All the evidence has not yet been as completely canvassed as it is intended it shall be before the cases go to trial.

The evidence in possession of the officers of the State has been kept strictly secret, and is not known to any but Circuit Attorney Harris, Col. Normile and Mr. Bliss, who will continue to keep it a secret until the trials, when it will be given to the sports in the nature of a surprise party.

The order in which the defendants will be called for trial is as follows:

The State against Pete Manning, Thos. Garland and Thomas Goodrich; Peter Manning, Peter Manning, James Torrence, John Burke, Joseph Clarke and John Bruce; John Bruce; August Sodtman, Henry C. Pate, John C. Appel, Arthur Lyons, Charles W. Batchelder, Milton Peters, Allen Simmons, Thomas Burke and F. B. Thompson; R. C. Pate, August Sodtman, Henry C. Pate, John C. Appel, Miles Wellington and Michael Burke; Aug. Sodtman, H. C. Pate, John C. Appel, Arthur Lyons, C. W. Batchelder, Milton Peters, Allen Simmons, Thomas Burke and Addison Lady; Joseph Clarke, John Bruce; Charles Smith; John Sommerville, Shrimp Eddy and William Scott; John Hanley; Michael Burke; Allen Simmons; Joseph Clarke; Joseph McCarron; Charles Potee; James Ames and John Hanley; Joseph McCarron; Isaac Treadway and Henry Wilder; Thomas Burke; James Ames and John Hanley; Harry Knapp; John Hanley; Thomas H. Goodrich.

The remaining cases have not yet been docketed. These being the more important, the above arrangement was made; the others will come on as they happen to be docketed by Clerk Staed, who has no instructions concerning their position on the docket.

FALL OF THE BASTILE.

Details of the French Celebration—A Feast, Fireworks and Music.

The French citizens are determined to celebrate the Fall of the Bastile on the 14th of July with imposing ceremonies and a brilliant series of entertainments, commencing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and closing with a banquet at 10 o'clock in the evening.

The Committee of Arrangements last evening held an important meeting and outlined the general features of the observance, which will be as follows: The fete this year will not be held at Schnaider's Garden, but in the southern part of town, in Anthony & Kuhn's Garden, better terms having been made with the proprietors of that resort. The afternoon programme will consist of music, dancing and refreshments in the garden. At 8 o'clock in the evening the ceremonial observance will be ushered in with a grand salute of 21 guns. After musical selections from French composers, including patriotic airs, an opening address will be delivered by the honorary President of the Day, Emil Karst, French Consul. This will be followed by singing, tableaux, pyrotechnic displays and orchestral music. A special feature will be made of the fireworks, which will show to advantage from the elevated position of the garden. The programme will be interspersed with patriotic speeches by distinguished guests. At 10 o'clock the company will repair to the hall, where the banquet will be spread. The French Consul will preside, with A. A. Mellier in the vice-chair. The special toasts provided for will be: "The Republic of France," response in French; "The United States," response in English; "The Day We Celebrate," response in French; "The Sister Republics," response in French. The expenses of the celebration will be met by private subscription.

A Newspaper Factor.

The Probate Court has under consideration this week some exceptions to the final settlement of the Bingham estate. The parties interested seek to charge the surviving partner, Daniel McArthur, with the value of the late Mr. Bingham's interest in the good will of a publication circulating in railroad circles, known as the "Railway Register." Some newspaper men were summoned from the business departments of the daily press to testify concerning the value of the good will in question. The testimony generally bore to the effect that no definite value could be fixed in the case of a publication devoted to a particular trade interest, the pages of which were chiefly given up to advertisers. The value of the good will in any case of a paper of that description depended upon the energy of the advertising solicitor.

Refreshment stands will be erected, where those who do not care to provide their own dinners will be able to supply all their wants. No beer or other intoxicating beverages will be sold or allowed to be introduced on the grounds, and every precaution will be taken to render the affair first-class in every respect. Tickets are in the hands of members of the association and may be procured upon application for 25 cents.

Extreme Destitution.

Mrs. Le Brau, a widow in destitute circumstances, with four children, was reported to the police to-day. The woman and her little family were unable to pay the rent and were yesterday ejected from a room at No. 711 Rutger street. Capt. Fruchte investigated the case, which he reports as very worthy of any assistance that they may receive from charitable persons.

THAT goes without saying—MELLIER'S CINCHONA HAIR DRESSING, the popular toilet article used by the elate of our citizens.

The Allen Estate.

Ann R. Allen, the widow of Hon. Thomas Allen, William Russell Allen and George W. Allen, sons of the deceased, were granted this morning in the Probate Court letters testamentary on the estate. No bond was given and the value of the estate could not be stated as it has not been determined, being of too vast a character to report upon at present.

About No. 2.

DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2 is intended for those who want a dime package of Long Cut Tobacco. A great many people prefer Long Cut to Granulated for smoking, and yet do not want to pay the price necessary to secure the finest grade.

DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2 is specially prepared for these folks, and it is the very best that can be made to sell at the price. You will notice two things about this package. First—the name of W. T. Blackwell & Co. isn't on it, and second, the trade mark of the Bull is missing. Why is this? Because our name and Bull trademark stand as guarantee that the tobacco contained in those bags or packages is the very best and purest that can be made, and this DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2 is not the best, and we cannot afford to secure a temporarily large sale by deceiving you, and so we don't put our name or trade mark on the package, but let it stand on its own merit.

Don't think now, because of this, DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2 is some poor worthless trash that you don't want; it is really good tobacco, a good deal better than some that makes greater pretensions. Do you smoke Long Cut, and do you feel that ten cents is all you want to pay for a package of smoking tobacco? Then just get a package of DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2, and we think you will have to admit that it beats anything you have ever smoked—unless you paid a good deal higher price. You know the only GENUINE DURHAM TOBACCO is made by W. T. Blackwell & Co. Nobody ever thought of manufacturing tobacco in Durham, or of calling their goods by that name, until we had created such a demand for our tobacco that every smoker called for DURHAM. Unfortunately, being the name of the town we can't control it as we can the Bull trade mark, and so there are imitations of our Durham Tobacco, and to prevent your being imposed on we will tell you how to know that you get the GENUINE DURHAM LONG CUT NO. 2.

It is put up in tin foil packages, and on one side is a picture of our factory, and on the other a picture of a girl smoking a cigarette.

Be sure you get the genuine—it hasn't any manufacturer's name on the label—and you will be more than pleased with it.

If at any time you want the very finest goods made, ask for BLACKWELL'S BULL DURHAM LONG CUT, or GRANULATED, or BLACKWELL'S BULL DURHAM CIGARETTES.

AN ELEGANT DRINK.

DR. LYNCH'S TONIC

Is a Powerful Tonic and Sedative

It induces sleep, cures night sweats and malaria, neutralizes the injurious effects resulting from the excessive use of wine, whisky and beer on the liver and kidneys, and is the only alcoholic drink in the world that does not excite the brain and cause nervous tremor and general prostration.

The most delicate woman can drink it without injury.

KNOWING

the excellence of the material composing Dr. Lynch's Tonic, we can recommend it as a healthy drink.

JESSE JAMES.

Wanted—Agents for the Life, Times and Treacherous Death of Jesse James, written by his wife; the only life authorized by her, and which will not be a "blood and thunder" story, such as have and will be published, but a true life by the only person who is in possession of the facts—a faithful and devoted wife. Don't be fooled by persons advertising old books as new, authorized works. THERE IS ONLY ONE BOOK AUTHORIZED BY WIFE AND MOTHER. Copies of letters of authority, with fac-similes of signatures, mailed on application. Truth is more interesting than fiction. Agents should apply for territory at once. Book now ready. Wall Street News.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Stocks irregular. Mobile and Ohio opened higher and Manhattan 1 lower. After a fractional decline in some shares an advance of ⅛@1 was recorded. Central Pacific, Lake Shore and Louisville and Nashville are the most conspicuous. At 11 o'clock there was a general reaction of ⅛@½, while Louisville and Nashville fell off 1⅝. The steamer Margiston, of the new line between New York, Newport News and Brazil, was loading yesterday at the Chesapeake and Ohio docks, Newport News, with Richmond flour and West Virginia coal for Brazil. Wheat a shade lower and unsettled; fair speculative trading.

Commercial Chips.

A cotton firm's travelling man, who has lately been all through Southern Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee, telegraphed from Martin, Tenn.: "Wheat crops largest ever known. Corn fine; greatly increased average. Cotton not half a crop; much plowed up."—Joe Carr, the Exchange caller, seems to have forgotten the little speech he made to the Call Board operators the other day, when he told them that he would never reopen the call on any article after the hammer had fallen. This hint is thrown out for a little pointer, as it were, and, as he is alleged to be a first-class first base player, it is to be hoped he will catch on.—New corn has been received in Chicago from Texas, the first of the season. This was sweet corn, however.—Stocks of wheat in store here and posted to-day show a decrease from last Saturday of 158,823 bu., with only 49,872 bu. No. 2 red on hand. Withdrawals for week from elevators were 61,572 bu, for city milling and 135,136 bu. for rail shipment. Stock of corn is 159,141 bushels smaller, with 152,890 bushels No. 2 mixed and 87,285 bushels No. 2 white-mixed now in store; week's withdrawals were 132,555 bushels to city trade, 49,865 for rail and 184,016 for river shipment. Oat stock 5,178 bushels smaller and only 19,724 bushels No. 2 here; withdrawals for week 28,602 to city, 3,257 to railroad and 4,385 to river. Rye decreased 13,769 bushels, mainly going out by rail. No stock of barley here now.—Complaint is heard from some of the members at the scarcity of clean towels in the wash-room of the Exchange. After 12:30 o'clock it is almost impossible to get a clean, dry towel, and parties who are detained after the Exchange closes usually have to use their handkerchiefs and coattails if they want a dry rub.

Reports on the condition of wheat throughout the West continue flattering, and with anything like favorable harvest weather, large receipts of new wheat are anticipated this month. A quarter of a million bushels at the least is expected from the lower river, from Southern Illinois and Southeast Missouri, where the harvesting is going on steadily now.—Smith, with Cole Bros., has just returned from a trip through Missouri. He says he never saw such magnificent prospects. The wheat is turning yellow, and general harvest will commence in this State by a week from next Wednesday. In many fields the harvesting machines are already in position ready to begin operations.—When Green Larimore, John Booth, John Larimore and Tom Booth meet in solemn caucus on the rostrum steps, another boom to the town of Larimore is assured.—A perfect nuisance to the members is the ear-splitting yells of the telegraph messenger boys, who let out the most fearful howls when they want to call any one for whom they have a message. When the call is going on the noise they make is simply unbearable and should be suppressed at that time, if no other.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION.

Flour lower, fancy being well sustained, as it was so scarce, while lower grades were dead flat.

Wheat declined. Grades dull and very weak, with very little demand, as most millers were out; speculators took nearly all the No. 2 red. Futures unsettled, but generally weak, closing at declines of 1 13-16c for June, ⅞c for July, 1c for August and year, 1⅛c for September and 1⅛c for October from yesterday's close.

Corn lower. Fair order and milling demand for grades, latter class getting nearly all the white-mixed. Futures showed more activity at the decline; closed 1c off for June, ⅝c for July, ⅜c for August, ⅜c for September and year and ⅝c for October.

Oats lower. Grades declined sharply and were very weak, as offerings were much larger and the demand smaller, with buyers standing off for sharp concessions. Samples dead dull at the decline. Futures weak, closing 2c lower for June, 15-16c for July and 1⅛c for August and year; active trading in July.

Rye flat, with grades neglected and few samples on sale.

Hay lower and slow, as orders were scarce and local feeders well supplied.

Provisions held firmly and generally sold higher, but business rather small at the advance.

Highwines steady, 165 brls selling at $1 15. Chicago and Cincinnati $1 15; Peoria $1 12.

Lead nominally unchanged at $4 35 for hard and $4 50 for soft, but latter to be purchased at that price and no buyers; white hard salable at $4 35. Spelter quotable at 5⅛@5c.

Mrs. Dix and her daughter, Miss Octavia, will leave for Chicago on Wednesday, to visit their cousin, Mr. Sam. Johnson. They will be absent some weeks.

Mrs. Albert T. Kelley will leave next week for New York, where she will join Mr. Kelley's parents and spend the summer with them at the Eastern watering places.

Mrs. Smyth has a niece from Buenos Ayres visiting her, the wife of the most prominent dentist there. Her brother is a professor in Akron College, Ohio, and quite an artist.

Lieut. Dourdy was married this morning to Miss Annie Clarkson, daughter of D. B. Clarkson, Baldwin, St. Louis county. They will visit Memphis before going to his post in Colorado.

Mr. Edward Sutter of this city was married Tuesday, May 22, to Miss Josephine Leopold, daughter of ex-Alderman Leopold, of Belleville, Ill., at the German Methodist Church.

Mrs. Belle McLeod Smith, one of Mochesi's favorite pupils, will spend her vacation in America. She will sail from Liverpool on the 29th in the Bothnia, and will visit Mrs. Walter S. Bartley during the latter part of September.

There was a garden party at Uhrig's Cave on Monday night—among them Miss Lettie Davidson and Robert Goode, Miss Fanita Heywood and Saunders Foster, Miss Dorcas Carr and Page McPherson, Miss Luna Garrison and Will B. Smyth, and Maj. Reed.

Next Saturday the ladies interested in St. Luke's Hospital will give their annual fete champetre at the Fair Grounds. Refreshments will be served at the House of Public Comfort. There will be croquet, lawn tenis, music and dancing. The grounds will be handsomely illuminated.

Next Saturday the ladies of the Art Association will give a complimentary excursion upon the steamer Chas. P. Chouteau, leaving the wharf at 4 o'clock. There will be music, singing and recitations by members of the association. Postlewaite's orchestra will furnish music for dancing.

Miss St. Cuentin, who is now playing at the Pickwick the part of Serpolette in "The Chimes of Normandy," has only been in America three weeks. Her first appearance was in London, in 1874, when she played with the Irrationals, an amateur company composed of many society ladies and gentlemen, Lady Libright, Lady Moncton, Sir Charles Young, etc., under the patronage of the royal family. Her notices from the press were so flattering that she resolved to adopt the stage as a profession. She is also an accomplished French scholar and can play and sing as well in French as in English.

Mrs. Barnes gave a children's party on Thursday to her little daughters Jessie and Eva. The invitation cards were embellished with Mother Hubbard designs: Little Boy Blue, Little Bo-Peep, etc. The little folks enjoyed themselves very much and afforded as much pleasure to the older people, of whom there were quite a number present, among them Mr. and Mrs. Gus. Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Stroether, Dr. and Mrs. Goodman, Mr. and Mrs. Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Bartley, Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Hill, Mrs. E. L. Mitchell, Mrs. Selby, Mrs. Philip Taylor and daughter, Miss Nannie Taylor, Miss Jennie Minor and many others.

XAUPI'S.

The annual fancy dress ball given by Prof. Xaupi and his pupils took place last night at the new Armory Hall. This event is always looked forward to with interest from the fact that the professor has taught the grandparents, the children, and is now teaching the grandchildren of the St. Louis people. The large hall was well calculated to display the beautiful costumes of the children. There was a large attendance of the parents and friends of the children enjoying and watching the perfectly trained children in various dances. The refreshments served were for the benefit of Trinity Church.

BOISLINIERE RECEPTION.

A reception was given on Friday evening at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Boisliniere in honor of Miss Mizner, of San Francisco. There were present Dr. and Mrs. Boisliniere, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. V. Carton, Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Kelly, Mrs. Barry, Misses Boisliniere, Miss Mizner, Miss Dorcas Carr, Miss Wickham, Miss Clark, Miss Fanita Hayward, Miss Lulu Scott, Miss Myra Newman and sister and Miss Lockwood; Messrs. Boisliniere, Capt. Clark, Mr. Avery and party from Louisville, Mr. Conde Pallon, Mr. Harry Hayward, Mr. Breck Jones, Mr. Warren Johnson, Mr. Ed. Johnson, Mr. Arthur Leo, Mr. W. B. Smith, Mr. Thomas Slaughter, Mr. Semple, Mr. Robert Floyd-Jones, Mr. Lou Hirschberg and Mr. Thomas Doan. There was music and dancing, Miss Dorcas Carr favoring the party with some sweet songs.

THE LACKLAND LUNCH.

Last week quite a triumph of art in the way of lunches was achieved by a young lady in the absence of her mother. It was pronounced one of the most beautiful entertainments of the season. The luncheon was given by Miss Daisy Lackland to ten of her young lady friends. The floral decorations were artistic and beautiful. From the chandelier over the center of the table was suspended a straw hat filled with flowers tied with satin ribbons, to be distributed as bouquets du corsage; at each plate was placed a small chapeau filled with flowers, and in the center of the table was a large crystal bowl filled with pond lilies bordered with colored flowers. A delicious menu was served by Spilker in many courses, and beautiful bonbons and favors were distributed to each guest.

THE WEST END CLUB.

The opening of the Pickwick Theater on Tuesday evening brought out the society people in large numbers. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Gustine Russel, Mrs. Floyd-Jones and her niece, Miss Cairns, Mrs. Lucy Ames and her daughter, Miss Mamie Ames, Dr. and Mrs. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Roberts, Mrs. Alvord and Mr. George Alvord, Mr. W. G. Smyth and Miss Billingsley, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley D. Scott, Mrs. George Hayward and Misses Florence and Fanita Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Carr, Miss Ada Ames, Miss Mizner, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kelley, Miss Morrison, Miss Dorcas Carr, Miss Papin and Miss Boisliniere. The boxes were all occupied. In one of them Mr. Wm. H. Thomson and family; Mr. Henry Edmunds, Miss Alma Breckenridge and Miss Lena Newman in another; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Simmons and the Misses Glenn in another; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Norris and Miss Millie McMillan in another; Mr. and Mrs. Joe McLellan, Mr. and Mrs. Brookmire, Mrs. T. J. Scott and Miss Ada Massie in another; Mr. and Mrs. Moses Fraley, Mrs. Myer and Mr. and Mrs. Frank occupied a box. Immediately after the performance the members of the West End Club adjourned to their club rooms on Olive street, where a reception was tendered the ladies. The halls, corridors and stairways had been handsomely decorated with plants and blooming flowers. The pavilion at the back was a perfect bower, illuminated with Chinese lanterns. Here refreshments were served in elegant style by Bears. An orchestra was stationed in the balcony above, and Maddern's military band from the Pickwick played a number of choice selections in front of the house. There were six hundred persons in attendance, the ladies appearing in handsome reception toilets.

Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison wore an elegant robe of heliotrope satin en train, with deep flounces of point lace.

Miss Mimi Morrison looked lovely in a cream tinted satin with garlands of crimson roses.

Mrs. Albert Kelley wore a reception robe of valenciennes lace, with natural flowers.

Mrs. Judge Laughlin, a white toilet of muslin and embroideries with large white hat and plumes.

Miss Dorcas Carr looked lovely in a toilet of white muslin and lace.

Miss Bri Harrison, jupe and basque corsage of scarlet satin with pannier overdress of garden brocade; elegant laces and diamonds.

Mrs. Carroll was very handsome in white grenadine, with garniture of pomegranates, a riviere of diamonds about her throat.

Mrs. Joe Carr, a very becoming toilet of Paris muslin, en train, trimmed en tablier, with tiny ruffles, large bunch of white roses at the waist, white chevalier hat with plumes.

Miss Eugenia Thompson, escorted by Dr. P. S. O'Reilley, royal purple satin with pardesseus of Spanish lace; capote of Spanish lace studded with pearls.

Miss Ferguson, ciel blue satin with cuirass of brocaded blue and silver, open, flowing sleeves; helmet bonnet of blue.

Miss Ada Evans, escorted by Mr. Chas. Melton, pink satin slip, with overdress of valenciennes lace; Tyrolean hat of chip with garlands of blush roses.

Miss Joe McLellan, Marie Louise satin combined with blue and gold, brocaded hat to correspond.

Mrs. T. J. Scott, black silk over a jupe of black and scarlet-striped silk, black hat with garland of red roses.

Miss Ada Ames, a lovely white toilet of muslin and lace, with white chip hat and plumes.

Miss Alma Breckenridge in a becoming dress of white snuddah cloth, with garniture of delicate flowers, white chip hat and plumes.

The guests were received by Messrs. John M. Harney, President, E. C. Simmons, Wm. H. Thompson, John Donaldson and W. C. McCreery, Vice-Presidents. After enjoying the hospitalities of the club, the guests attended the Armory reception, which was a very delightful entertainment, the large hall affording ample room for really enjoying the dance. Refreshments were served by the ladies for the benefit of St. Luke's.

THE TALLY-HO.

The perfect weather this week delighting the hearts of the turfman has been equally pleasing to the fair sex, who have turned out in large numbers to witness the races, causing the grand stand to assume the appearance of a garden with parterres of gay colored flowers. Parties have been formed each day, drag parties, carriage parties, T carts and Dog carts, but nothing has equaled the Tally-ho with its "four in hand" and bugleman.

On Monday a party of ladies and gentlemen, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Dousman, were the happy possessors of the coach. The party consisted of Miss Ada Ames, Miss Mizner, Miss Thaw, Miss Myra Newman, Miss Chauvin, Miss Laura Doan and Miss Saunderson, Messrs. John Glover, Ed. Johnson, Austin Johnson, Peter Blow, Lou Hirshhberg and Percy McLaran.

On Tuesday some of the young men of the West End Club chartered the coach. The party consisted of Messrs. Morrison Renshaw, Stirling Edmunds, W. C. McCreery, Frank Day, H. P. Hull, Fred. Kretschmar, Tom Bartholow, J. R. Adams, A. G. Thompson, Sid Francis, Ed. Sturgeon and E. S. Lemoine, Jr. They created quite a sensation as they drove into the field with their white plug hats, with blue veils tied around them.

On Wednesday the coach was chartered by a party of the Elks, who caused quite a little commotion as they hove in sight displaying their gay umbrellas of divers colors. The party consisted of Messrs. John A. Cockerill, Fred. Kretschmar, Col. J. C. Normile, Charles E. Ware, Charles Kinnan, John R. Reavis, P. Short, Sam Wetherell, Charles Joy, Will J. Thornton, and Morrison Renshaw.

Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lucas invited a party of ladies and gentlemen to accompany them in the Tally-ho, the complement being Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Filley, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders Foster, Maj. and Mrs. Lee, Miss Dorcas Carr, Miss Hopkins, Miss C. C. Maffit and Miss Lulu Knapp, Messrs. Hunt, James L. Johnson, Maj. Wm. S. Reed, Dr. John Wiggins and Charles Wiggins.

On Friday in response to Maj. Reed's invitation a merry party-chaperoned by Mrs. Robt. Filley, were driven out in the Tally-ho by Mr. Charles Moffitt. Miss Mizner, Miss Lulu Hopkins, Miss Dorcas Carr, Miss Ada Ames, Miss Sanderson, Miss Lulu Scott, Miss Lucy Russell, Miss Fanita Hayward, Mrs. Robert E. Filley, Maj. W. S. Reed, Mr. Charles Moffitt, Mr. Dozier, Mr. Sam. Tutt, Mr. John E. Mulford, Mr. Charles R. Chambers and Mr. Leon Hunt. Before the races were concluded the party repaired to Forest Park, where a fete champetre was served under the trees. It might in truth be termed a feast of champagne. The happy party returned in time to attend a party given complimentary to Miss Mizner at Dr. Boisliniere's.

THE RACES.

Among the many ladies in attendance each day at the races have been noticed: Mrs. Geo. Hayward, Misses Fanita and Florence Hayward, Mrs. McCreery, Mrs. Floyd-Jones, Mrs. Lucy V. S. Ames, Mrs. Ashley D Scott, Mrs. Knapp, Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, Mrs. Albert T. Kelley, Miss Mimi Morrison, Mrs. Moses T. Fraley, Mrs. Joel Swope, Mrs. Ike Cook, Mrs. J. W. Norton, Mrs. J. W. McCullough, Mrs. Thomas Wood, Miss James L. Patterson, Mrs. Theo. Hunt, Mrs. Charles E. Ware, Mrs. Milton Young, of Kentucky, Mrs. Rob. Filley, Mrs. Henry Lucas, Mrs. R. J. Lucas, Miss Cora Baker, Miss Hunt, Miss Papin, Miss Chauvin, Miss Sloan, Miss Thaw, Miss Dow, of Chicago, and Miss Doan.

On Thursday Mr. Henry Ames was accompanied by Miss Mizner in his handsome drag with gold mountings. The lady's costume was of white silk mull, with white coaching hat and plumes, white parasol.

It is said Miss Dorcas Carr looked charming one day in a white toilet and Derby hat, with blue veil tied about it a la Tally-ho.

On Wednesday Miss Ada Ames was particularly lovely in a toilet of peach bloom muslin, well suited to her dainty style.

Miss Cora Baker wore a most effective and becoming toilet, all black, with large Rubens hat covered with black plumes.

Mrs. Moses Fraley appeared one day in a very elegant and striking toilet of cerise satin, with hat, plumes and parasol of the same glowing color. Another toilet worn by this lady during the week was all black Spanish lace for dresses over black satin, with hat, plumes and parasol to match.

A DRAG PARTY.

A drag party was composed of Miss Lewis, of Alton, Miss Wiley, of Mississippi, and Miss Williamson, of Mississippi, with their escorts and chaperones. Their toilets were exquisite.

Miss Lewis wore a rose-colored surah silk, with overdress of nun's veiling of the same shade, trimmed with Languedoc lace, Tyrolean hat of white chip, faced with rose-color and edged with lace, a wreath of wild roses around the crown, pink surah silk parasol covered with frills of lace, and ornamented with a spray of wild roses on one side, fan the same shade.

Miss Wiley's dress was a delicate lilac foulard, with fichu of Spanish lace, a capote of the same lace, with clusters of violets, white parasol with deep fall of lace around it.

Miss Williamson wore an exquisite Parisian toilet of silver-gray alpaca, trimmed en tablier, with numbers of tiny knife pleatings and bouffant draperies at the back. With this was worn a scarf edged with lace of the same shade, caught at the throat by a spray of pomegranates. The bonnet was a small French poke of silver gray, lined with flame-color, and trimmed with a wreath of pomegranates tied under the chin with white and gray tulle. The parasol was of silver gray, lined with flame color and finished with lace.

Regarding Summer Clothing,

We would state a fact or two that is of considerable importance to all buyers of Ready-made Clothing. Thin, flexible fabrics require greater skill to make a perfect-fitting garment than is necessary with heavier fabrics. Recognizing this fact, we employ only the best talent to cut and make this class of goods, and as a natural result we have earned a high reputation for the fit and elegance of our Summer Apparel for Men and Boys. Not only do we show large and desirable lines of staples, but our assortment contains many CHOICE NOVELTIES that are difficult to find elsewhere, and which are duly appreciated by gentlemen of taste in matters of dress. Many gentlemen who, for years, have paid fancy prices for garments made to order, are agreeably surprised to learn that at our establishment Clothing of the most elegant character can be obtained at prices that show a startling margin between our reasonable figures and those demanded by high-priced Merchant Tailors.

If you are not convinced that we are able to do what we have done for so many others, we ask of you one trial. Confident of our ability to please you, we remain, yours truly,

The Strongest Life Insurance Corporation in the World.

The successful management of the ÆTNA is attested by the fact that it conducts its business with expenses lower than most companies. It receives a larger rate of interest on its investments than any of its competitors. Its income from interest pays its death losses and running expenses. It gives to its insured liberal dividends, and furnishes insurance at less cost than any other company. Parties contemplating insurance will consult their own interests by examining the Plans and unusually Low Rates of the ÆTNA. Every form of Life Term and Endowment Policy in general use is issued by the ÆTNA, and upon the most favorable terms of payment.

The ÆTNA issues Policies upon all plans in general use, with the privilege of paying premiums in one, ten, fifteen or more years; also quarterly and semi-annually. Its rates are low (lower than most companies). Its policies are non-forfeiting by their terms. The surplus earnings are divided among the insured at the end of the first year, and annually thereafter. The ÆTNA issues Renewable Term Policies at unusually low rates, with a Cash Surrender Value after three annual payments; also low rate Stock Policies, giving each year what is equivalent to a dividend in advance. It also prints upon its Policies what they are worth in Paid-up Insurance when lapsed.

A Policy in the Ætna Life, at age of 25, will cost $12 64 per annum for each $1,000 of insurance, with a clear provision for a Paid-up Policy after three annual payments, for at least the amount paid in, or a CASH SURRENDER VULUE—which reduces the actual cost of insurance to the minimum.

OUR CAPITAL LETTER.

Washington City and Its Extremes of Climate.

Fun in a Dull Congress—Phœbe Couzins—The Suffragists—Danenhower, the Lion.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—No journalist, however truly good, stands a chance of being behind in telling some things about this town. One is the weather. There is a tradition that Washington is built directly over the spot that Bob Ingersoll does not believe in, and that the crust is so thin in some places that the brimstone can be smelled. This is not wholly improbable, but when one records June days when an overcoat is necessary—or rather June weeks—it takes a very robust reputation for truth to stand it. Besides, there are June days when the statue of Washington on the dome of the Capitol is seen to open his vest and exclaim: "This is too infernally hot for anything." When our climate is not that of the North Pole it is that of the Equator. In less than a week as the asphalt pavement melts and runs into boiling puddles, large fissures will be seen in the ground through which a sulphurous odor will be wafted. It looks as if the present session of Congress, which has been the dullest and stupidest on record, meant to brighten as it takes its flight. There has actually been some fun going on for the past week. The $33,000 for which the Yorktown Commission ran short has been under consideration. It is curious to see how the social training of men comes out in the discussion of such matters. Some of them have not the remotest idea of the difference between guzzling on a funeral train and the banqueting of national guests when everything must be forthcoming in abundance to keep up the reputation, not of a few, but of the nation, for hospitality. If we did not mean to be hospitable, we should not have invited the Frenchmen to visit us. If we did not mean to give them champagne and cigars, and take them around in carriages, we should not have asked them to leave their own country, where such things were habitual to them. In short, we should not have invited them if we could not afford to entertain them. At the debate Richelieu Robinson got a good grip on the tail of the British lion with one hand, while with the other he yanked the unicorn around by the horn. He got up, turned red in the face and made an ass of himself, as he always does. He said that the event had been turned into a "British saturnalia," and howled out that the centennial celebration was a meeting of all the friends of tyranny and monarchy, and went on like the hyena politician he is. Mr. John Randolph Tucker got up, and in a few sentences expressive of good sense and good breeding brought the House to its senses and to the unseemliness of discussing the cost of a hospitality that could occur but once in a hundred years, and the bill was passed in the end as it would have been in the beginning but for the fractious opposition of a class of men who make cheap reputations out of that kind of thing.

The second entertainment for the benefit of the Garfield Hospital came off on Monday night. This time the atrocity of holding it in the rotunda was not thought of. The fashion of summer gardens has taken root in this city, and it was held in the beer garden of a German who has succeeded in making his place attractive and respectable. There were crowds of society people present, and dubious refreshments and excellent beers and Tyrolean singers, who jodeled, much to the delight of the audience, and considerable money was realized. What an encouraging sign it is to see such simple and healthful places of open air amusement springing up! Ten years ago who in Washington would have supposed that a beer garden would have been the place selected for one of the most fashionable entertainments of the season? But it has actually happened, and the dome of the Capitol did not fall, either.

The season for excursions certainly has not closed, as an editorial party, over a hundred strong, have taken possession of the city for the last two days. On Tuesday night they visited the White House in a body, under the chaperonage of Senator Don Cameron. The President was grace and affability itself, and did not look bored a bit as he shook hands with the editors of what the great metropolitan papers disrespectfully call the scrub exchanges. There were many ladies in the party, and, of course, they went away in a state of effervescing ecstacy. If there is one thing that the President understands better than keeping his own counsel it is how to give taffy to the gentler sex. He can administer it with a grace and dignity that would do honor to the admirable Crichton—and the truth is, no man, woman or child can resist that male fairy in the White House.

Miss Phoebe Couzins is here and wants a place in the Utah commission, and vows that the President is going to give it to her. Phoebe has fallen a victim to executive soft-soap. If nothing else had been done by the President to prove his fitness for the office, his masterly treatment of the she-suffragists would stand as a monument of tact. Sheridan himself could not have got rid of them with more ease and mutual satisfaction. They took his soft nothings for gospel truth, and trotted all around town telling how much the President was in favor of the "movement" and how delighted he was to meet them, and a lot of similar nonsense that tickled the President to death when he heard it. Phoebe is the best-looking advocate of female suffrage in this country. Mrs Isabella Beecher Hooker, that delightful, venerable, charming old lady, with only one single screw loose in her whole machinery, and that is on the franchise, said pathetically as she looked around upon the assemblage of old cats that composed the convention: "Where are the young women? Where are the sweet girl faces?" Ah! dear old lady, the girl heads and the girl hearts have something else to do besides clamoring for suffrage, and the melancholy fact for you is, that until the young women take hold, nothing can be done; nothing is ever done without young energies and young minds.

Lieut. Danenhower has been assigned to duty in Washington, and the Secretary of the Navy intends to give him a good long rest before he goes to sea again. He will be engaged at the Navy Department in preparing the records of the Jeannette. He is just as much of a lion as ever, and at church last Sunday the minister took him for a text and delivered quite a sermon to him, of him and about him, which might have been somewhat embarrassing for the hero, who sat as a red lobster under the infliction. The new War, State and Navy Department is an instance of too many families trying to live under the same roof. The War and State Departments have crowded the Navy Department into a little corner, where, although a cat might be swung, certainly a naval "cat" could not. This magnificent building, one of the finest and most artistic in the world, is the architectural boast of Washington. Its noble proportions are grand without being pretentious, and, for once, the folly of building in a hurry has been avoided. Three sides of it are virtually completed, but it is thought it will take ten years longer to make the building finished in every

SPORTING SUMMARY.

Base Ball Games and News—Races and Turf Topics.

The Browns and Alleghenies meet again this afternoon at Grand Avenue Park, the last game betwen the clubs for several weeks. The Browns have won two out of three games played this week and the "Allies" will make a big effort to place the same number to their credit.

If several good kicking straps could be properly adjusted on each member of the Pittsburg nine, the team would play better ball, and would also draw larger crowds. To-day's game will begin at 3:45 p. m., and will be a bitter one. It is very likely that it will open with a fight over the umpire, the Pittsburg's refusing to take Houtz and the Browns insisting on naming him, as is their right.

GAMES YESTERDAY.

At Boston—Bostons 4, Clevelands 0.

Providence, R. I.—Chicago 14, Providence 4.

Worcester, Mass.—Detroits 7, Worcesters 4.

In Troy—Troys 7, Buffalo 2.

New York—Metropolitans 7, Philadelphias 1.

RACING.

At Dubuque, Ia., races concluded yesterday. The 2:50 race was captured by Trapeze; Don Quixote won the free-for-all.

Boston, Mass.—At Mystic Park yesterday afternoon, Lula F. won in the 2:46 class. Gus Wilson's J. P. Morris won in straight heats. Time 2:21¾, 2:22¾, 2:22¾. This race closed the meeting.

Detroit, Mich.—The unfinished race in the 2:25 class was won by Forest Patcher. In the 2:40 class Maud T won, taking the first, fourth and seventh heats. In the 2:30 classes Anna took the third, fourth and fifth heats, winning in 2:24½, 2:25 and 2-26A.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The winners in the West Virginia State Fair trot yesterday were Hoosier Girl and Membrino Eagle. John Splan drove Mattie Hunter a mile in 2:20¼ on a half-mile track.

At Coney Island—The first race was won by Charley B. The seven furlongs, for all ages, was won by Laura Glass; Duke of Kent second. One and one-eighth miles, all ages, Capias first; Clarendon second; Baby third; Time, 2:09½. Hurdle race, 1¼ miles, won by Ohio Boy.

SPORTING NOTES.

Browning, of the Eclipse leads the American Association players at the bat, and Keenan, Pittsburg's catcher, leads in fielding.

Walker has made three home runs this season, leading all players in the country in this respect. J. Gleason leads the St. Louis batting list.

The Girards meet the Mutuals to-morrow behind the Fair Grounds. The Mutuals will have to do some "tall" playing to win a ball from the Girards.

The Live Oaks play the Our Boys to-morrow behind the Fair Grounds. The pitcher and catcher of the Live Oaks, Brown and Lynch, are said to be a very strong team.

For the American Association championship, up to yesterday, the Browns and Athletics were in the van, both having won twelve games, but the former have lost ten games and the latter seven.

Wreden and Maloney, the pugilists, who were to fight near Line Island, in the Ohio river, on Monday, announce a postponement on account of the threatened interference of the West Virginia authorities.

Providence has second, a commanding lead for the League Championship, having won 16 games and lost 6. Boston follows with 11 won and 9 lost. Chicago has won 8, and lost 10. This does not include yesterday's games.

THE Personals on the sixth page should be read by every one.

GARIBALDI.

The Veteran in New York, and How He Helped Italians.

An Italian Interviewed in the N. Y. World.

"When Garibaldi first came to this city he went to the Pavilion Hotel, where he was sick for a while. He had rheumatism which he got in South America camping on the Rio Plata, in those terrible swamps. He was confined to his bed for some time. I do not know how long, but it was for some days. The Italians and many Americans wanted to give him a public reception. Do you think he would take it? Ah, no. He, Garibaldi, said, "There are many political exiles in Italy who have not money enough to come to this country. Spend, then, the money you would spend for the reception that I do not need and help them to come where they will have liberty. That is a better reception than any for me.' But, then, you know he was Garibaldi."

"When did he go to Staten Island?"

"The Pavilion Hotel is on Staten Island. He made the acquaintance of Mr. Muecci and the tenor Salvi, and they told of the colony of exiles on the island. At the time there were quite a number of Italian patriots who had been forced to leave their own country and who settled down on tha island. Well, Garibaldi went there and made up his mind he would live among them. So he and Muecci and Salvi had a house together. But he saw before long that the Italian, did nothing all day but talk of Italy. It was good to talk of Italy, but it was better to work. So he went to Mr. Postaccaldi and he asked him for money; and he wrote to Mr. Carparetto, a wealthy Italian he knew in South America, and they both gave money. And Muecci and Salvi and Garibaldi himself and other Italians gave what they could. A factory for bologna sausage was started and the exiles had work."

"Did it succeed?"

"No, it was a failure. Then he thought what next could be done, and he got more money from his friends and this time started a factory for stearine candles. They say he worked in it. He may have done so for an hour or two for pleasure; about that I do not know. But he never worked for money. All the money was for the poor exiles who had none. They hired the house first. It was a villa belonging to Mr. Maruscheck, but then after a while they bought it. Making candles paid pretty well. There were a great many young Italians working in the factory. Any one who had fought in defense of Rome could get work there. There was a Col. Bovi, I remember, a young man who had but one arm, for he had lost the other in Rome. He was superintendent. There was another young Italian there, G. P. Morisini, who is now with Mr. Jay Gould. Mr. Morisini used to be with Garibaldi all the time, and he went with him on the Commonwealth as a boy."

"When did Garibaldi go on the Commonwealth?"

"He got out his papers as an American, so that he could get a certificate from the Government as a sea captain. Then he took command of the Commonwealth and sailed to Canton, in China, and then back here. Then he went to Italy. On all of these trips Morisini was with him as clerk of some sort. I do not exactly know what. When he returned he went into the employ of the Erie Railroad. Garibaldi, when he was here, was very simple in his tastes and his habits. He lived plainly and dressed quietly. Any one could see him that chose to call upon him; he put on no state or magnificence whatever."

THE SUMMER SEASON.

Theatrical Attractions at the Gardens.

Uhrig's Cave—The Pickwick—The Park—The People's—Dramatic Notes and Gossip.

The summer gardens have attracted considerable attention this week and met with remarkable success. The most important event was the opening of the Pickwick and Al Fresco Theater, which occurred last Tuesday amidst brilliant and pleasant surroundings. An immense audience greeted the Hess Acme Opera Company, and the West End Club attended in a body. Under the management of Edward E. Rice and George McManus the Pickwick cannot fail to become a great feature of summer amusements. The Hess Opera Company proved strong in all its essential qualities. Miss St. Quinten made a pleasant impression, singing and acting with rare delicacy and good taste. She secured a number of recalls at the the very outset and continued throughout the week a prime favorite. Her voice is pure and fresh, while she has a plump, petite figure and graceful movements. Of the support, Mr. Mark Smith and Mr. Henry Peakes divided the honors, the former as the Marquis of Villeroi, and the latter as Gaspard. Miss Emma Ellsner, Mr. Alfred Wilkie, Mr. James Peakes and Mr. Allison are alike deserving of special mention for duties well performed. An excellent feature of the Pickwick entertainment is the series of concerts given by Richard Maddern's military band, which consisted of seven selections. Augustin Daly's company has played another week's engagement at Uhrig's Cave, appearing four nights in the "Passing Regiment" and two nights in "Needles and Pins." With such people as Miss Ada Rehan, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, Miss May Fielding, Miss Helene Stoepel, Charles Leclercq, James Lewis, John Drew, Harry M. Pitt and J. W. Shannon, nothing short of complete perfection could be expected, and but little short of that was realized. It is to be regretted that the cool weather incident to the first week rather interfered with all outdoor patronage, but the deficiency was more than met during the present week. The performances were all superb and were greeted with enthusiasm. Mr. Daly should now arrange for a winter visit, and make his triumphs here universally notable. The Park Theater has done a fair business, the Bijou English Opera Company appearing in "The Mascot." The company succeeded in giving performances of merit, and delighted the audiences that nightly attended. Miss Amy Gordon, Mr. Skiff, Miss Sallie Cohen, A. W. Morgan and O. W. Blake did the principal parts to the satisfaction of everybody. In brief, the Park has demonstrated its rights to recognition as a first-class theater and is meeting with the success it deserves. The People's Theater has been occupied by Robert McWade, who played "Rip Van Winkle," with an ordinary support. The condition of the weather gave him an excellent opportunity to draw the down-town audiences, and assisted in making his engagement profitable in every respect.

UHRIG'S CAVE.

To-morrow night a special performance will be given at Uhrig's Cave by Tilli's Marionettes, with a programme particularly interesting to ladies and children. On Monday evening Ford's Comic Opera Company begins an engagement in "Olivette." The familiar faces that graced the company last season are all present, with several stronger ones and an entirely new chorus and new scenery by Albert. Miss Blanche Chapman will renew her former triumphs in the title role, and Miss Marie Bockel appears as the Countess, with Genevieve Reynolds and others in the cast. Altogether the outlook for next week's business at the Cave is decidedly encouraging, since the real summer garden temperature has commenced in earnest, and the people will respond to outdoor attractions more naturally. The succeeding performances of Tilli's Marionettes will be given every afternoon in Uhrig's Hall.

PICKWICK THEATER.

The Hess Acme Opera Company will likewise appear on Monday evening, in Audran's charming work, "Olivette," cast to its full strength. The music, chorus and ensemble promise to be of a high order of merit, and will undoubtedly draw a good share of the public patronage.

PARK THEATER.

To-morrow evening will witness a revival of "Pinafore" at the Park Theater by the Bijou English Opera Company. The only addition to the personnel of the cast will be that of Mr. J. H. Shewell, who anticipates making a great success of Dick Deadeye. The revival cannot fail to attract attention, as "Pinafore" has almost become a stranger. Entirely new scenery will accompany the present production.

PEOPLE'S THEATER.

To-morrow night Mr. Robert McWade will temporarily cast aside the beauties of "Rip Van Winkle" and gladden his friends by a special performance, in which he enacts the titles roles of Toodles and Paddy Miles, and produces his original burlesque on "Richard III." entitled "Dick Mit Dhree Eyes." The principal feature of the burlesque is a battle between Richard and Richmond on horseback.

MR. POPE'S BENEFIT.

The complimentary benefit tendered Mr. Chas. Pope has been definitely arranged for Friday evening. the 16th inst., when "Ingomar, the Barbarian," will be produced, with Mr. Pope in the title role, and Miss Florence Elmore as Parthenia. Yesterday the beneficiary received a number of flattering letters, enclosing large subscriptions for tickets. R. P. Tansey wrote: "Recognizing the great public advantage of your enterprise, I want to be counted among the subscribers to the fund, and herewith enclose $50 for reserved seats." John Jackson writes: "Allow me to send you $25 for my subscription to the complimentary fund." Marcus A. Wolff encloses $25 and says: "If all your friends go, your house will not be large enough to accommodate them." Mr. Pope is now engaged in selecting a company to produce "Ingomar" on the occasion named.

LOCAL DRAMATIC NOTES.

The season of the new Olympic is expected to commence September 12.

"All at Sea," the new York success, will be at the People's next season. It is declared to be an imposing spectacle.

A grand display of pyrotechnics will precede the performances at Uhrig's Cave and the Park Theater next Monday evening.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL NOTES.

Sir Randall Roberts has been re-engaged as a member of the Kate Claxton company for next season.

Miss Sara Jewett of the Union Square Theater will move into her summer residence at Pigeon Cove this week.

Maj. Pond, who sailed last Saturday week for England, is understood to go abroad to bring back Mrs. Langtry.

Mr. Frank Sanger, manager of Willie Edouin's "Sparks" company, committed matrimony in New York last Thursday.

Mr. George H. Griffith and Miss Kate Meek have been engaged by Manager Stetson for the Modjeska company next season.

Mr. George D. Chaplin, now playing Maj. Britt in "My Partner," will be a member of Mme. Janauschek's company next season.

"Evangeline" will be given in Australia next season, and Joe Harris has been engaged by Manager Rice for the Lone Fisherman.

Mr. George C. Boniface, Jr., who is to be at the Museum next season, is shortly to marry Miss Ernestine, daughter of the late W. R. Floyd.

Mr. W. G. Hunter, Jr., formerly connected with the Madison Square Theater, is managing the Eastern tour of George Holland's Comedy Company.

Arrangements have been made for C. H. Smith's double "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company to play in England after its engagement at the Boston Theater.

Miss Mary Shaw, formerly of the Boston Museum, and last season with Miss Fanny Davenport, has been engaged at Daly's Theater, New York, for three years.

Miss Clara Morris was so unfortunate last week as to lose an emerald ring, presented to her by an old friend, and so highly valued by her on that account that she has offered $100 reward for its recovery.

D'Oyley Carte has bought outright the to-be-completed new opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, which, following the rule of P's, will, it is said, be called "Princess Pearl." Manager Stetson has secured the New England right of production.

Mr. Willie Edouin has engaged Mr. Max Figman as second comedian and stage manager of his "Sparks" company next season. Mr. George Purdy has been re-engaged as musical director; he will pass the summer with Lytell's company in the maritime provinces.

The programme of exercises for the Saengerfest in Philadelphia has been arranged. The visiting societies will be received on the afternoon of June 29. Haydn's "Creation" will be performed the same evening. The fest closes on July 4, with a grand national celebration.

During his American tour next season, under the management of Mr. R. M. Field, Mr. Boucicault will produce his new Irish drama, "The Boyne Water." His principal support will come from the London theaters. Mr. Sheal Barry and Miss Sadie Martinot will be members of his company.

Mr. Charles R. Thorne, Jr., has given up the estate at White Plains, N. Y., on which he proposed to pass the summer, and will go to Cohasset, where he has exchanged residences with Mr. Stuart Robson. After summering so many years on the seacoast, he could not feel at home inland.

Mr. Nathaniel Childs has been re-engaged as Mme. Janauschek's manager for next season. The famous tragedienne is on her way to East, and in four weeks will sail for Europe, with the intention of purchasing the most elaborate wardrobe possible for use in the new plays she proposes to produce next season.

Miss Mary Anderson, who came to Boston last week to play for Mr. M'Glenen's benefit, has returned to her home in Brooklyn. It is not probable, after all, that she will go to Europe this season. Her new steam yacht Galatea was launched last week, and it is most likely that she will divide her time during the vacation months between the new vessel and her summer residence at Long Branch.

Mme. Eugenie Legrand is a native of Paris and graduated with the highest honors at the Conservatoire. She played two seasons at the Odeon, and afterward at the Vaudeville. Subsequently she appeared at several London theaters, having learned the English language, and then went to Australia, where she played star engagements in all the principal colonial cities. She came to America about a year since, but has not acted until quite recently.

It appears that Maurice Grau will retain many of last season's artists after all, using them in an opera comique company, and forming a new company for opera bouffe with Mme. Theo as its leading attraction, she now dividing the honors in that line with Mlle. Judic. The opera comique company will go to Havana and Mexico, but Mme. Theo's company will make a tour of the States, giving but sixty performances in all. Mlle. Theo will be seen in "Pomme d'Api," "Fleur d'Oranger," "Niniche," "Lily," "Bagatelle," "Mme. l'Archiduc," "La Fille du Tambour-Major," "Les Cloches de Corneville," "Girofle-Girofla," and some other works.

"Cherubino," of the London Figaro, says of operatic matters there: It is understood that Mme. Christine Nilsson has accepted an engagement at Covent Garden to play the parts of Margaret and Helen of Troy in the forthcoming revival of Boito's "Mephistofele." Mme. Nilsson's engagement with Mr. Gye extends, I believe, over two years, and the lady contracts to sing either in England or the United States during both summer and winter. No finer company of sopranos has ever been collected in one opera-house than that of Covent Garden. The list includes Mme. Patti, Lucca, Albani, Nilsson, Valeria, Madi and Sembrich. This rather shuts out Mme. Nilsson from being Manager Abbey's prima donna next season.

Miss Annie Cary has now fixed the dates of her charity concerts: June 23 for the Lewiston General Hospital and June 27 for the Bates College, both having been postponed on account of her illness. Speaking of her sickness, the favorite contralto said a day or two ago: "You know singing is my bread and butter, and I should not, simply from a whim or caprice, throw up engagements which would lose me $7,000 in a few months. That is the amount I have had to lose since February last by reason of being unable to sing. Dr. Eldridge is attending me, and he knows how badly my throat is. The worst of it is I can scarcely make people believe I am as bad as I am. Physically, I feel and appear in good health. I eat large-sized beefsteaks in the morning. My throat doesn't feel sore. There appears to be irritation, but still I must sit around here and be idle. It is discouraging and tiresome."

Miss Minnie Hauk has some sensible ideas regarding what is needed to make English opera, or opera in English, successful in this country. Being questioned as to whether she was to return to America next season at the head of an English opera company, she said: "Oh, no. I am anxious that one should be formed, with myself as a member of it. I could not be prima donna and manageress too—that would be too much altogether. I have had many offers to sing here in English opera. Numerous managers have asked me to join them. But the trouble with them all is that they would be more than content with a single star supported by a second-class constellation and with these to make the eccentric circuit, of the interior cities. I will never consent to sing with only mediocre artists. American managers are greatly mistaken in supposing that a first-class English opera company would not be profitable."

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so charcteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice.

SOUVENIR.

A delicate tangle of lace and scent—
  A tangle of lace; you gave it to me
  At the ball that night to keep for you.
While the quavering tones of the instrument
  Swooned to a tune that we two knew.

"To keep?" I said, and I thought, somehow,
  Your dark eyes with their lids adroop,
  After the waltz, and the light caress
Of your warm smile—and the airy bow—
  All of them answered a gracious "yes."

It was only a fancy of mine may be,
  The pure conceit of a mind unskilled
  In reading aright the fickle text
Of a girl's caprice—caprice, ah, me!
  But why should my mind grow vexed?

I am thumbing this gossamer thread to-night,
  While the lingering ghost of a dead perfume
  Tinctures the drowsy air, as if
To recall the fact that, perhaps, you might
  Have missed, in the wash, a handkerchief!

D. MARSDEN MILES.

A TRAVELER'S STORY.

TOLD BY A TRANSVAAL CAMP-FIRE.

"My father was a well-to-do farmer in England. I was his only child, and my mother died shortly after I was born. Our land was rented from a very large landed proprietor—a man who had made his fortune in business. He bought the estate about the time of my birth, and came occasionally to live at the large house attached to it, bringing his wife and children with him. His wife was a very kind but very homely person, who was liked by all the tenants. She was very kind to me, and used to have me a great deal at the 'Hall,' as the house was called.

"When I first remember her children, there were three of them—two boys and a girl; but before many years passed all but the youngest child died, and then Mrs. Clark, as I will call her, gave up going to Manchester with her husband, and always remained at the hall, thinking the country air beneficial for her little girl.

"The child's name was Lucy, and I thought her perfect. She was but a few years younger than I, and she and I were constant playmates in our holiday hours. My father sent me to a neighboring grammar shool, but kind Mrs. Clark often supplemented the teaching I got there by allowing me to profit by the lessons given to Lucy by a very accomplished governess.

"It was in this way that a great love of art was developed in me. I had some natural talent for drawing and painting, and I eagerly availed myself of every opportunity of cultivating it. Lucy and I never spent happier hours than those in which we used to go out sketching together.

"It all rises before me even now like a picture; the morning sun glinting through the trees and checkering our path as we wound through the wood; the discussion as to the best point of view for our sketches; the calm of the noon, when we used to stop our painting and have a picnic, feeling as if we deserved some rest after such hard work, and then our pretense when we used to say: 'O, this will never do, wasting so much light!' and begin to paint with renewed ardor until sunset.

"Then how delightful it used to be to wander slowly homeward, until we came to a certain stile where we always bade each other good-by, unless I were invited to spend the evening at the hall. There was a tangle of dog-roses and honeysuckle all around that stile, and a plowed field beyond, with the little spire of the village church showing in the distance, and the rooks were already cawing in the tall trees close by when Lucy and I used to say good night.

"The governess or Mrs. Clark was always with us, or I believe we should have kissed each other; but that was put a stop to when Lucy's tenth birthday came, and we marked her tenth birthday with a black cross in our memories in consequence.

"Looking back I often wonder why they let us grow up so closely bound together. I suppose it never occurred to them that any unhappiness might come from it. The farmer's son and rich heiress were sure to be separated by circumstances as soon as she should be introduced into society, and in the meantime I aided in making her happy, and was happy myself. I suppose Mrs. Clark looked no further, and Mr. Clark let his wife have her own way about all things that did not interfere with his own plans, and his plans were chiefly commercial.

"Lucy was 16 and I was 21, when Mr. Clark one day astonished me by telling me that he was going to speak to my father about sending me to Italy to study art. He sent for me into his library to tell me this. He sat in his arm-chair in front of the writing-table, on which lay a number of papers, and I stood before him. I did not know him well, for when he was at the hall I did not go there much, and he called me 'young man,' and spoke of my father as 'a very worthy man, who has striven to give you every advantage his limited means allow.' It struck a chill through me, although my heart leaped at the idea of going to Italy.

"The hardest part of it all was leaving Lucy, but I felt bidding good-by to my old father very keenly.

"I went up to the hall on the day that I was to leave the old place; Mr. and Mrs. Clark and Lucy were in the drawing-room when I entered. Mr. Clark bland and patronizing, Mrs. Clark tearful and nervous, and Lucy very pale and silent. It was a miserable affair, and I soon ended it. Mrs. Clark kissed me and cried, and called me her 'dear boy,' while Mr. Clark looked at her with a deprecatory smile. Then he shook hands with me a little pompously, and made a sort of valedictory speech which struck me as being like a funeral oration, and all this time Lucy sat with her head averted, and her hands clasped on her knee. 'Lucy, my girl,' said Mr. Clark, 'are you not going to wish your old playmate good fortune in his new life?' Then she sprang up and came over to me quickly. 'Oh, Frank!' she said, and, throwing her arms around my neck, kissed me. The next instant she was quite calm, with a look on her face I had never seen before. I believe she awed her father and mother, for there was no word spoken as I left the room.

"I walked rapidly home, crossing the old stile for the last time. I snatched a piece of honeysuckle as I passed, but I was no longer thinking of the happy bygone days. The portals of another existence had been thrown open to me for an instant, and I was dreaming of its radiance still. My father was in his gig waiting for me, and all the old farm laborers and their wives and children were gathered to bid me God-speed. My father spoke but little as we drove to the station, whither my luggage had been already taken in a cart. When we were a short distance from it he slackened the pace, and, putting one hand on mine, said: 'Frank, my boy, I've been thinking that it's a chance as how you may not like this new-fangled life you're going to. If you don't, why then write and say so to me without any further ado, and the old man will be right down glad to see you home again, and glad to pay back whatever Mr. Clark has spent on you, for that he mayn't be throwing it in your teeth.' I pressed his hand, and he went on: 'I'm glad to see you so mettlesome about going away, but just you take a word of advice from your old father. I don't know anything of making pictures or that like, but I take it that an artist has to learn his trade like any other man. You must know how to plow well if you want to get good crops, so don't you be in a hurry, but take to the thing steadily, and don't you go in for high-flying.'

"Well, I did go in for the thing steadily, and I made rapid progress. I used to write to my father and to Mrs. Clark and hear from them regularly. I never wrote to Lucy nor she to me, but I heard of her. She went to London the year after I left and was presented at court, and there was a great deal of company at the hall during the autumn and winter. I used to scan those letters which spoke of her as if they were enigmas, trying to extract some hidden meaning from them. Sometimes I fancied there was some covert allusion to her being mindful of me through all these scenes of pleasure; sometimes I felt racked with jealousy of some imaginary admirer of hers.

"At length I got a letter from my father, telling me of her serious illness, and then another from him, saying that he heard the doctors had ordered her to winter in Italy. Between these letters I had one from Mrs. Clark, mentioning that Lucy had been ordered to leave England for a time, and that hence I must not expect any more letters until she and Lucy returned home, for that during their absence her time would be fully occupied. She wrote very kindly, but I felt sure that the reason of her not writing to me again was that Mr. Clark objected to my knowing that Lucy was to be in Italy.

"How dreary that winter was, in spite of all the golden dreams of youth, fostered by all the poetical and romantic teachings of Nature, Art and History, with which the very air of Italy is electric!

"I became so restless that in the spring I left Rome for Florence. I had never copied in the galleries there, and I thought it would be a new source of interest for me to do so.

"One day I was seated in front of that beautiful portrait of Caterina Cornaro. I do not know if you have seen it. A sweet, sad face and a graceful figure, the bodice of the dress embroidered with gold and jewels, and the neck loaded with chains of pearls; magnificent fetters laid on their fair owner by the Venetian Republic when the Senate sold her beauty to the King of Cyprus, leaving her noble lover, young Lorendano, to die raving. I was copying this picture, and was greatly interested in my work. Many persons passed through the room, and some paused to look at my painting, so that I took little notice of the fact that some one was standing behind me, until I heard my name pronounced in a never-forgotten voice.

"It was Lucy, and alone! She was taller and more womanly than when I left her, but the same Lucy still.

"She told me that she and her mother were in Florence, waiting for her father to join them; that she had spent the winter in Sicily, and that her health was better, but that her mother's health was failing rapidly.

"She said that Mrs. Clark was in an adjoining room resting, and that I must go to see her. There was a calm power about her manner that surprised me, but she had lost none of her sweetness.

"Before we turned from the picture I was copying she asked me whose portrait it was. I told her, and she said:

"'So that is the face of the woman who let herself be bought and sold by a king and a senate, and not only herself but the man who loved her, and for whom she cared, too, in some pitiful sort of way! She could not have loved him, or she would have taught those haughty senators that there was something prouder and stronger than even their pride.'

"Mrs. Clark received me with tears of joy. I could see that she was very much broken, and that she was completely under her daughter's dominion, although Lucy used her power gently. She did not ask me to go to see them, but she said she would often come to see me at my work, and she made some weak little excuse for not inviting me to their hotel.

"After that I saw her and Lucy every day at the gallery, and Lucy often managed to be alone with me. We never spoke of our mutual affection, but we felt it, and words were not needed between us, even to explain why we did not speak of it. We lived in an atmosphere of our own. We knew that our happiness could not last long, but this only intensified our appreciation of it, and rendered each moment doubly precious, while a concentration of thought, feeling and of the expression of both grew out of our conviction. It seemed as if years of intimate knowledge of each other must be and were compressed in those few weeks."

"One day I was sitting at my easel, when a woman approached me and gave me at letter. It was from Lucy. She told me that her father had arrived and that she was to leeave Florence at once. She told me that her mother was too feeble for her to venture upon any assertion of her own wishes as to corresponding with me, for that if her father knew that she had been permitted to meet me constantly his anger would be excesssive. She said that I might write to her once, and give the letter to the wife of the porter of the hotel where she was staying.

"I did so. I poured out my soul in that letter, and she sent me an answer, which I got after she left Florence. I have got it still; in all my wanderings it has never left me. Yet it told me that there was no hope, only that she would be forever faithful to me, and called on me to trust her through absence and silence.

"My energy flagged, but I whipped myself up. I determined to be worthy of her, and hoped that perhaps I might win her; but six months after this my father died suddenly, and I reeled under the blow. I lost not only him, but the last chance of hearing anything of Lucy, for, since our meeting at Florence, Mrs. Clark had ceased altogether to write to me.

"My student days were past, and the sum of money Mr. Clark had generously given me was expended; but I had a small fortune left to me by my father, quite enough for me to feel independent.

"It is hard to work at art at all successfully when one's brain is in constant need of urging to do its best. In the excitement which follows any great shock which, while shattering an actual happiness, yet appeals strongly to the imagination, a mind deeply imbued with artistic feeling is likely to find its powers abnormally increased; but a reaction is only too likely to set in when the imagination has to be excited by the will, and in most artistic temperaments the will is not particularly strong, excepts when it acts spasmodically.

"I found all originality of design passing from me; no picture worth reproducing rose before my mental vision, and my very power of execution seemed failing. My health, too, began to give way. Just then I read a glowing account of the Kimbely diamond fields. In a fit of mingled hopefulness, restlessness and despondency I resolved to try my fortune there. I pictured myself returning to England a millionaire or dying in some tragic manner.

"Of course you know how it all ended. I worked hard and hoped, and hoped. I got some small diamonds and a very severe attack of fever. Then I tried farming and invested my money in a wool-washing business, but I was not sharp enough looking after the agreement as to the supply of water that was to be allowed to me from the little river which ran through my farm, and, after the deeds were signed, the man I bought it of sold the right of taking more than half the water to a farmer to whom he had sold a property higher up. I went to law and lost my case and a great deal of money. Then I tried transport-riding and lost heavily again, owing to various diseases of my oxen.

"I don't mean to blame my luck, as many men do. To a great extent a man makes his own luck, so that each misfortune which struck me disappointed me more and more with myself.

"Then came the finishing blow. I came across a old English newspaper, and in it I saw the advertisement of Lucy's marriage, or, I should say, the announcement of her impending marriage. It was to be a grand affair, and there were a great many details. After that I went down steadily. I am speaking too openly to deny that I often helped myself on the downward journey when I ought to have known better. Yet I have never parted with her letter, nor with the belief that, though her seeming faith may be given to another, her true faith is mine and mine alone forever, as she wrote."

Having finished these words, Frank Heathcote stood up wearily. I took his hand and pressed it, and soon after he lay down to sleep. I lay down too and watched the flicker of the fire for long, thinking over the story I had heard. I could not sleep, and presently I stood up and went softly over to where my strange acquaintance lay.

He was lying with his rug flung partially off, and with one hand under his head. The other lay on his breast, and his shirt being open, I could see a ribbon around his neck attached to a small bag which was partially concealed by his hand, and from which a portion of an old letter protruded. I could see its worn and discolored edges by the light of the moon which had lately risen, and the rays of which fell full on his haggard yet refined face, and, as I watched the expression of it change, according as the dream which was passing before him troubled his slumber, I thought of how the rays of the same moon that shed her light upon him might be playing on the luxurious couch of the woman he had faith in even through faithlessness.

The next morning I induced him to leave his companion and come with me. I was writing a book, and I assured him, and truly, that his artistic talent, of which I convinced myself before engaging him, would be invaluable to me in illustrating it, my own artistic productions being rather unsatisfactory.

He proved a very agreeable companion, and I enjoyed my wanderings much more after he became my guest.

About two months after my meeting with Frank Heathcote we two were riding in advance of the wagon over the brow of a wooded hill, from whence we looked down a gorge and over a wide expanse of forest which stretched below us. "Stop a moment," said Heathcote. "What is it that this scene reminds me of? It seems so familiar to me."

Then suddenly he exclaimed: "By Jove! I dreamed of this place years ago when I was a boy, only that there were a number of elephants ranging about the brushwood and trampling it down."

"There were a number of elephants here until lately," I said; "it is a curious coincidence," and we rode on.

At the bottom of the gorge we crossed a small stream, off-saddled and watched the horses browsing until the wagon came up and crossed the rivulet, when the oxen were outspanned. Night came on, and we had supper, saw to the horses and oxen being settled for the night and then sat down by the fire. It was very dark, for there was no moon, and there were a great many overshadowing trees.

Presently we heard the creaking sound made by a wagon moving at some distance. It was evidently coming from the opposite direction to the way we had come, and after a while we heard not only it but the tramp of the horses, the rider being evidently a little in advance of the wagon. Then horses and rider passed into partial view for a moment, irradiated by a sudden flame that sprang up from the fire. The solitary figure had something unusual about its appearance which excited my curiosity. I stood up and walked toward it. It was a woman mounted on a handsome horse, and with a led horse by her side. She sat with one hand on the animal's crupper, leaning back and half turning to see the wagon go through the drift.

"Steady with the break there," she cried, in Boer lingo, as the foremost oxen took the water, and the lumbering wagon slowly slid down the incline. A handsome figure she sat there carelessly, with her wide sombrero hat shading her face completely from the flashes of light that came from our neighboring camp-fire.

I walked over to her, and she asked, in the same language she had used before, whether there was a good outspan on the other side. I could tell from her mode of speech that she was English, so I answered in our common tongue.

She laughed pleasantly and thanked me, then cantered through the rivulet, and I heard her give the order to outspan. There did not appear to be any European with her.

After my return to our fire a good deal of speculation went on between Heathcote and myself as to this unusual apparition. We saw her camp-fire lighted, and could make out that she saw to her horses being fed and blanketed, and to her oxen being tied up, before having her supper. When a gleam from her fire showed us that she was no longer occupied, our curiosity could not be restrained any more, and we went over the rivulet to introduce ourselves in the free and easy fashion of the country.

Her wagon was drawn up in a clearing, round which the forest made a dark semicircle. Three Kaffre boys were crouching over the fire and eating their supper out of a large gypsy pot; the shapes of the oxen and horses loomed out of the darkness behind her, as she stood full in the blaze of the firelight, her form erect, her hands clasped loosely before her, her head a little thrown back, and her eyes looking dreamily out into the darkness.

Heathcote seized my arm convulsively, and I could hardly repress an exclamation; but at that moment her eyes fell on us, and she started.

I saw their faces change as they looked earnestly at each other while I spoke, the color fading from each; then "Frank!" "Lucy!" broke from their lips, and their hands were knit together.

I left them to their happiness, and sat long by my own fire, pondering over the strangeness of this life, over how few are those blessed with the power of evolving from nature her latent romance, and over what is the essence of that which we call by this name and of which most of us know so little.

Heathcote joined me at last. He had much to tell me. She had been promised in marriage by her father, and had refused to bow to his decision in spite of her mother's tears. She had told the suitor that her heart belonged to another, and that she would not be faithless to him; but it was of no avail. He replied that he would abide by her father's word, and hoped to win her heart after he had bought her hand. Then she solemnly assured him and her father that she would refuse to pronounce her marriage vows before the altar. Her threat was disregarded as an idle one.

She wrote to the clergyman who was to officiate, but her letter was intercepted.

She was jealously watched, and the preparations for her sacrifice went on.

At last the fatal morning came, and so self-possessed was she that her father murmured words of praise as he handed her from the carriage, and, passing her arm through his, led her up the aisle of the church, where roses and lilies were strewn before her. There she stood beneath the two men who had bartered her body and thought they could barter her soul, and looked up into the kind face of the old clergyman.

His lips were parted to commence the service, when, with a rapid gesture, she threw back her veil, startling him and attracting his notice, while her voice rang out the words:

"I am here against my will; I appeal to you and to your Master."

The next moment her father had fallen prostrate and was struggling on the steps of the altar. He was removed unconscious, and died the next day.

Her mother lived for a short while after, always in very feeble health and suffering greatly from nervous depression, and Lucy was her faithful nurse.

It was only after her mother's death that she felt at liberty to make any inquiries as to where Heathcote might be, but all clew to his whereabouts seemed to have been lost after he left Italy.

Before that, seeking him, she had traveled a great deal on the continent of Europe; then a feeling of restlessness came over her, and she visited first North and then South Africa.

The wild life in the more remote parts of the latter had a charm for her. She picked up the patois of the Boers and a little of the Zulu languages, and, although often intending to return to her English home, still lingered. She had her own traveling wagon and her horses, but from a love of adventure traveled alone, except for her native attendants, fearless, because caring little for life, and at last her wanderings had led her to him for whose sake life henceforward would be dear to her.

That night I could not sleep, and I stood beside Heathcote's couch looking at him by the rays of a late moon. Two short months of comparative ease and happiness had wrought a change in him, but the greatest change of all was in the expression of the sleeper's face, as he smiled in his dream—a change worked by a short watch in the night.

As I stooped over him I noticed that the ribbon and the little bag were gone, and I guessed that the pledge of everlasting fidelity had been returned to her who gave it—to one who would treasure the worn and time-stained sheet of paper which had lain close to his heart for so many years whispering hope when hope seemed dead.

They were married at a missionary station which was within a few days' trek of our encampment, and then leaving their wagon and oxen with me, started for Pretoria on horseback, having bought a third horse to carry their simple baggage and cooking apparatus, also their blankets and a tethering-line for the horses.

Both of them good riders, and inured to hardship, I thought, as I bade them God-speed, that theirs was the very romance of marriage. To mount your horse at the church door, and, free from all the shackles of society, to ride forth into the wide veldt, with no one near you but the one you love best; to tether your horses at night and lie down beside them with your saddle for your pillow, and to wake up with the fresh morning breeze lifting your hair, and the rosy morning light bidding you welcome to another day of gladness; to have the memories of two days like this to look back on, must, it seemed to me, be worth suffering for.

They were to reach Pretoria on the evening of the third day. They trusted to obtaining food at the houses of the Boers they should pass. They intended, when they reached the village, to buy a light carriage, to proceed to Durban, and thence home to the old place, where they had wandered in childhood.

I was to dispose of their wagon and oxen for them, and to arrange for their heavy luggage being sent home.

As Heathcote rung my hand at parting he said:

"It is you who have saved us both; but for you this would not have been; but my unhappy past seems to me now like the shadow which adds to the luster of the sunshine."

And it is even so. In the spiritual as in the material world, where the sunshine is the most radiant, there the shadow will be the deepest. Those alone who, while standing in the shadow, can realize the existence of the sunshine, and while basking in the light can be mindful of the gloom, can understand what is romance, can see the beauty of nature or listen to her harmonies.

FROST AND SMOKE.

A Novel Method of Protecting Vineyards in California.

From the San Francisco Call.

Among the dispatches which have recently come from the interior of California respecting the condition of fruits and vines are several stating that Jack Frost swept over the bay counties one night last week and brought the usual devastation to fruit and vine plantations. In Santa Cruz, noted for its fine, though not early, fruits and grapes, and in Napa and Sonoma, where the vine flourishes principally, the damage seems to have been very extensive. California is destined to be the greatest fruit and grape region in the world, and it is rapidly acquiring an enviable reputation for late, early and erratic frosts, which worry the farmer and make his life miserable. As nearly everything in this State is peculiar, it is perhaps meet that the frosts should be governed by no law; but it is somewhat difficult for a person to engage in fruit or vine growing to have his crops destroyed in this way and keep his temper. It is estimated that many thousand dollars' worth of grapes have been withered by frost in Napa and Sonama during the past, which is a most extraordinary thing at this season of the year. Science has done something already to obviate this trouble, and it may be that time will perfect a system of thwarting the ravages of Jack Frost. It is not well known to the general public that a layer of frost upon a tender plant does not materially injure it—that is, the bare frost, produced by dew being frozen by low temperature. It is the rays of the sun in the early morning thawing out the plant which withers and destroys it. This fact was first noticed when a heavy fog kept the morning sun off a Napa vineyard, and prevented the destruction of a crop of grapes. It was then suggested that smoke would answer the same purpose, and it was tried with considerable success. During the last few years the vineyards of Napa and Sonoma have been experimenting, until at present they have a regular system of "smoking vineyards." Kruz, Groezinger and a few others, who have extensive vineyards in Napa Valley, two years ago warded off the frost successfully. Between the 1st and 15th of April, if the season is not unusually unpropitious, the blossoms appear upon the grape vines. If a frost occurs between those dates, followed by a warm sun, the first, and sometimes the second, crop of Zinfandal is killed, while all the other varieties, Malvoise, Rose of Peru, Emperor, Reisling, etc., suffer almost total destruction. To smoke the vineyard at the proper time, a watchman, a howitzer and a thermometer are put on guard. From the 1st to the 15th of April the sentinel keeps his eye on the thermometer, from 3 o'clock in the morning until daylight, and if it goes down to the freezing point he discharges his howitzer. At once a small army of vineyardists waiting for the sound turn out of warm beds and repair to their fields, around and through which have previously been placed small iron vessels filled with tar, or piles of dry wood. A flambeau quickly does the work, and Old Sol rises over the hills to see the valley covered with an impenetrable cloud of smoke, and revelling in a smell that would offend his olfactories if he were less than 95,000,000 miles away. The atmosphere is gradually warmed, the frost melts slowly off the fruit crystals and the grapes are saved.

Don Cameron and the Editors.

Washington Special to Cincinnati Commercial.

Don Cameron recognizes the power of the press sometimes. Not content with pressing one of the most valued and voluminous contributors to the Pennsylvania press (Sundays excepted) for Congressman-at-large, he is devoting himself assiduously to the representatives of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association, now here on their annual summer trip. It is rumored that, with the same generosity which he exhibited for the "306" brass pot-lids, he is defraying the expenses of this trip. Be this as it may, his tooth has ceased to ache, and he is making himself very agreeable to the editors and their families. Last night he presented the party at a special audience to the President, in his most engaging manner, when he kissed a little dot and then handed her to the President, who promptly and gracefully followed his example. They won the hearts of all the ladies and two-thirds of the gentlemen. That wicked kicker, Dr. Bradley, the editor of Gov. Hoyt's organ at Wilkesbarre, was the only guest who sneered audibly when Senator Cameron invited his colleague to accompany him to the White House last night. Senator Mitchell declined, pleading his prior engagement. He went to hear the father of Bright Eyes, late a Ponca maiden, lecture instead. He regrets disconsolately to-day that he did. Senator Cameron will entertain the editors at his handsome Scott Circle residence before they leave. The toothache has fled and he is smiling sweetly, save when he thinks of it.

The Cross in Far Siberia.

From the Washington Critic.

Lieut. Danenhower tells an incident of his Arctic experiences which will prove of deep interest to our Catholic readers. He says: "After the sinking of our vessel we landed, as you know, on the Siberian coast. After proceeding some distance inland we met some of the native Indians, whom we found, to our surprise, to be Christians and Roman Catholics. After eating, they crossed themselves, shook hands, and said, 'Pashee Bah.' They also showed us their crosses, which they kissed, and I was very glad to have in my possession a certain talisman (the lieutenant meant a miraculous medal of the Blessed Virgin) which had been sent me by a Catholic friend in San Francisco, with the message that it had been blessed by a priest, and I would be sure to be safe if I wore it. I did not have much faith in this, however, but when I showed it to the natives they kissed it devoutly. It was the only article in the possession of the party, indeed, that indicated to the natives that we were Christians. You can imagine our feelings at meeting these people, for they were the first strangers whom we had seen for more than two years, and I never before felt so thankful to missionaries as I did on that day at finding that we were among Christian natives."

FIGHTING EDITORS.

How the New Orleans Editors Popped Away at Each Other.

New Orleans Special to the Cincinnati Gazette.

On Wednesday last the New Orleans Picayune contained an editorial on the general fund of the State, in which it wanted to know what had become of that fund. Maj. E. A. Burke, State Treasurer, and manager of the Times-Democrat of this city, telegraphed an answer from Baton Rouge to the Picayune for that paper and his own. This answer was followed by an editorial in Friday's Picayune, which further reflected upon Maj. Burke's official integrity. That night Maj. Burke reached the city and sent a peremptory challenge to Mr. Caleb H. Parker, editor of the Picayune. It was accepted, and on Saturday Mr. Parker's friends announced as his choice of weapons the old Mississippi smoothbore rifle. It is understood that with this weapon Mr. Parker is an expert shot. Major Burke's friends had the choice of distance, and in order to equalize the chances decided that the duel should be fought at two and a half paces. Mr. Parker's friends protested against such a distance, as it would make the encounter necessarily fatal, whereupon the seconds of Major Burke made a counter proposition, suggesting that ordinary weapons be used at the usual distance. This suggestion was adopted by Mr. Parker's friends, who moved dueling pistols, whereupon Maj. Burke's friends fixed the distance at fifteen paces. This was objected to by Mr. Parker's friends, who desired that the distance should be twenty paces. This point was finally conceded, and twenty paces was decided upon as the distance. It was also decided that the duel should take place near the slaughter-house, just below the city, in the parish of St. Bernard, this morning at 6 o'clock.

These preliminaries were arranged yesterday afternoon. In order to throw the police off the track Mr. Burke took the steamer for Baton Rouge yesterday afternoon and the public was given to understand that the affair had been settled. He got off at Carrollton, however, and at a late hour last night made his way through the city to the place of rendezvous. Here he joined his friends who had preceded him and awaited Mr. Parker's party. This gentleman arrived about half-past 5 o'clock. It had rained all night, and the weather was decidedly unpleasant for the business in hand, a steady drizzle being kept up throughout the progress of the duel. Mr. Parker was accompanied to the field by Messrs. G. L. Hall and Jos. Renshaw, with Drs. Isaac Scott and Ernest Lewis. Maj. Burke's seconds were Messrs. James D. Houston and John Augustine, Dr. Loeber acting as his surgeon. Maj. Burke won the choice of position, and was placed with his back to the river. Mr. Parker had the wood. Both gentlemen fired almost together, and when the smoke cleared away it was seen that neither was injured. Mr. Parker's friends then stepped forward and inquired if it was necessary for affairs to go further, that Mr. Parker was willing to acknowledge Maj. Burke's courage and personal and official integrity, but insisted that he had not transcended legitimate journalistic criticism in his comment. Maj. Burke's friends were not satisfied with this conditional disclaimer, and the pistols were loaded again, and this time Maj. Burke fired slightly in advance of Mr. Parker. Both shots missed their mark. Mr. Parker's friends then offered to acknowledge Maj. Burke's courage and personal and official integrity, provided the latter would acknowledge Mr. Parker to be a man of courage and honor. Maj. Burke's friends replied that they were not on the field to vindicate Mr. Parker; that their principal had been wronged by him; that they sought reparation for that wrong, and would be satisfied with Mr. Parker's disclaimer, provided it stood alone. Mr. Parker's seconds refused to make an unconditional acknowledgment, and a third shot was exchanged, neither principal being wounded. As before, Mr. Parker's friends advanced and again made the proposition of mutual acknowledgment. They were again told that Maj. Burke was on the field to vindicate himself and not Mr. Parker, and it was useless to call another parley, unless Mr. Parker was prepared to make the acknowledgment he had proposed without any conditions whatever. The pistols were again loaded and discharged, but without result. No time was lost in preparing them again, and a fifth shot was exchanged. When the smoke cleared away, Maj. Burke was seen to stagger, and one of his seconds rushed up and caught him as he was falling to the ground. It was seen that the wound was a severe one, and in response to a question by Mr. Parker's friends, the duel was declared at an end, and they were informed that they could take their principal from the field. Mr. Parker then retired uninjured. Upon examination, it was found that Maj. Burke had been shot through both legs, the ball entering the right limb, six inches above the knee, and passing into and almost entirely through the left, raising the skin on the opposite side. It was cut out without difficulty, after which the wounded gentleman was conveyed to his residence in the city. No arteries or bones were broken, and his wounds are not considered dangerous, although quite painful.

Each gentleman had four friends with him on the field, besides his seconds and surgeons, and besides these about thirty people, attracted by the preliminaries, gathered at a respectable distance from the dueling ground and witnessed the meeting. Both Major Burke and Mr. Parker acted with exceptional gallantry and cool determination throughout, neither moving a step from his position until Major Burke fell, about a half hour after the duel began.

Wages in America and Europe.

Washington Special to Chicago Times.

In reply to a resolution passed by the United States Senate December 21, 1881, Mr. Joseph Nimmo, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, has handed in a report embodying the results of an elaborate research into the subject of wages in the United States. In the manufacture of iron it is shown that a good workman can earn either by the day or ton nearly, if not quite, three times as much here as in England. In the manufacture of thread the wages in the United States exceed those in England by an average of 62 per cent Tanners earn more than 13½ per cent more than in England, 54½ per cent more than in France, and 57½ per cent. more than in Germany, and in the case of curriers the difference is nearly twice as great. No statistics of the woolen manufacture could be obtained. According to Mr. William C. Wyckoff, the wages in the silk manufacture are twice greater here than in England, three times greater than in France and Germany, and four times greater than in Italy. Statistics are also supplied, so far as obtainable, of the comparative cost of living in the different countries; but, according to the report, all considerations being duly weighed, the balance is greatly in favor of the United States.

Aids for Deaf Persons.

From the New York Tribune.

In a store window in Broadway, where a dazzling collection of spectacles, a variety of ear-trumpets, and several dozen opera-glasses are displayed, a number of ordinary-looking canes and a commonplace-looking umbrella stand in the corner. A placard affixed to one of the cases designates it as an acoustic cane. Another placard on the umbrella conveys the information that with the assistance of the acoustic umbrella a deaf person can hear conversation when the person speaking is at a distance. A second inspection of the canes after reading the placards discloses the fact that they consist of bamboo sticks with a varnished black metal top and a very small horizontal piece for a handle. A salesman in the store exhibited a cane to a Tribune reporter, and twisting it in his hand disclosed a row of holes encircling the black metal. Placing the small horizontal piece in his ear, in the easy and natural way that some men put the handle of a cane in the mouth, he assured the reporter that his voice was so loud that he could scarcely endure it. He then showed a small aperture through the horizontal handle. This connected with an ear-trumpet ingeniously arranged in the top piece of the cane. The reporter then held the handle of the cane to his ear. It sounded as a sea shell would. When the salesman spoke, his voice was increased several times in volume. The chief value of the invention lies in the fact that the cane or umbrella may be used without betraying the fact of the owner's deafness.

"It is wonderful," continued the clerk, "how much people dislike to admit that their hearing is defective. They come in and ask to look at ear-trumpets for friends. We know that they want them for themselves. People who are hard of hearing are just as numerous as persons who are near-sighted. If the wish to ignore deafness was not so pronounced, ear-trumpets would be as common as spectacles."

"We have sold thousands of these," continued the storekeeper, showing a miniature silver ear-trumpet calculated to fit inside the ear. "They are popular because they can be used without exciting remark."

Another miniature ear-trumpet was shown, made from two metals, the union of which produced electricity intended to have a vivifying influence on dead or dying nerves. The appliances for the relief of deafness are all costly. The canes are $25 apiece and the miniature ear-trumpets $8 a pair.

Baptists Repudiate Jesse James.

From the New York Herald, 6th.

The Rev. Dr. Samson presided at the Ministers' Conference of the Baptist Church yesterday. Several ministers from the West, who came here to attend the missionary anniversary, were introduced and made addresses. The Rev. Mr. First, of Chicago, begged that in future all pastors sent West be men "with sanctified common sense, and not geniuses, who require to have the brakes put on them every now and then."

The Rev. William Harris, of St. Joseph, Mo., defended the Baptists of that State from the aspersions put on them by the Eastern public generally in reference to the Jesse James case. "When the notorious bandit was killed in St. Joseph," said Mr. Harris, "Mrs. James sent for me. I went to the county prosecutor's office and saw her, but I found she did not want religious consolation, and I felt as if I could not give it. The Baptist cause has received such a blow in the State that I deem it my duty to make a statement in the matter to set us straight with you, as Baptist ministers, and with the public generally. As a citizen of Missouri and as a Baptist minister, I desire to say that the people of Missouri look upon the removal of Jesse James, the notorious bandit, as a blessing. The people of Missouri have never said and do not now say anything in admiration of the man or in condemnation of or regret at his removal. The condemnation of the Ford boys for the manner in which they killed him has been wrongfully construed into an approval of the bandit. It has gone forth that Jesse James was a member of the Baptist Church at the time of his death, that the Baptists of Missouri regret his death, that many of them wept at his funeral and that a Baptist minister delivered a funeral oration eulogizing the dead robber. Jesse James was not a member of any church, Baptists did not weep at his funeral, and a Baptist minister did not eulogize the man. I declined performing any religious service over the remains at St. Joseph, but religious services were held in the Baptist Church at Kearney, Clay county, Mo., in obedience to the earnest request of Mrs. Samuels, the mother of Jesse James, who is a Baptist. The minister, one of the most discreet in the State—the Rev. J. M. P. Martin—did not mention the name of Jesse James or refer to him or his career, but made a strong, earnest and solemn appeal to the persons present to prepare for death. All that has been said in the public press representing the Baptists of Missouri as in sympathy with the man Jesse James is not only undignified, but positively untrue, and as a Baptist minister, living in the city where he was killed, and knowing whereof I speak, I have this to say: that no people in this Union held Jesse James in greater detestation than the Baptists of Missouri, and that their dignity as an aggressive, earnest and cultured people is compromised by such aspersions as have been attempted to be cast upon them."

The Rev. E. L. Scofield read the essay of the day, entitled "The work and doctrines of the church, as illustrating the life and teachings of our Lord," the scope and handling of which elicited general commendation in the discussion which followed it. The Conference closed with an animated address from Rev. Father Stimsen, of Kansas, formerly of this city, in which he depicted the "glorious effect of the prohibition law in the State."

Fashionable Horseback Riding.

From the Philadelphia Times.

The height of the riding season has been reached, and fashionable Philadelphia may be seen almost daily prancing in the park on thoroughbreds. More horsemen and horsewomen have been seen out during the past four or five weeks, it is said, than have ever participated in pleasure riding before. Yesterday afforded a particularly fine spectacle, and through all the picturesque wooded sections of Fairmount and in favorite riding places around Germantown and Bryan Mawr there were hundreds of graceful habits fluttering, hundreds of mettled horses ambling, and hundreds of manly riders erect in saddles with their whip-canes hanging by their sides. Fifty or sixty years ago horseback exercise was very common in Philadelphia among people of old English stock and antecedents who were not Quakers. Even some of the most noted Philadelphia fishing clubs which still preserve their organization in those times were accustomed to hunt as well as fish, and regular chases across the country after fox and other game came off as regular as the seasons. Many of the old riding and hunting "meets" have died out, but there are a few organizations like the "Hare and Hounds" and "Rose Tree" which are still flourishing, and this season, especially, have displayed unusual dash and spirit.

No Praying for Rain.

From the New York Tribune.

The Bishop of Melbourne was recently asked to frame a special form of prayer for rain to be used throughout his diocese in view of the severe drouth with which the colony was afflicted. To the astonishment of everybody, the Bishop flatly refused. Changes in the weather, he said, were the result of unwavering natural laws, and prayer was an agency more fitted for securing spiritual blessings than material needs. It would be much wiser if people set themselves to utilize the water which they now allow to flow to waste into the sea than to content themselves with praying to be delivered from the consequences of their own neglect. A great sensation has been produced by this refusal in the colony, where it is felt that the Bishop has taken adroit advantage of the opportunity to make a telling point against the Colonial Government, which, with the sanction of Parliament, has refused to carry out his favorite scheme of a grand national system of irrigation.

Bound Her Chicks Should Swim.

From the Bangor Whig.

The toughest story of the season comes from Sullivan, Me. Some time ago a hen was set upon ducks' eggs, and in due time the ducklings were out and on their way to the nearest water. Biddy was much alarmed at the apparent folly of her brood; but after a few days she lost all fear, and each morning led them to the water and patiently waited until they were done bathing. After a few weeks the ducks were able to take care of themselves, and the hen sat upon eggs of her own kind. When the chicks were hatched she had not forgotten what appeared to be her maternal duty. She led her flock to the water, but to her surprise not one entered. After some time spent in talking to them in hen language, trying to convince them that it was their duty to go into the water, she became exasperated at what looked like disobedience on the part of her children, seized them one by one and threw them in, drowning the whole flock.

When Mr. Toy, a venerable citizen of Connecticut, was married to a youthful bride a few days ago he gave the Rev. Mr. Dodge, of Yarmouth, Mass., $1,500 as a wedding fee and added another $1,500 to enable Mr. Dodge to visit Europe.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

Pen Picture and Sketch of Michael K. McGrath.

His Peculiarities—The Secretarial Duties—Chief Clerks of the Bureau.

The various departments of the State government are a prolific source of mystery, notwithstanding their powers and duties are definitely prescribed by statute. Even the local attorneys scarcely avail themselves of the opportunities presented to familiarize themselves with the interior management of State affairs, and as a consequence there are very few people who have the slightest intelligent notion regarding the matter. The fees attached to the clerical work performed by each department should be thoroughly within the knowledge of everybody desiring business in that connection, but not once in one hundred times is the proper amount forwarded. These facts are a source of continued annoyance, and should be regulated by an extension of popular information. The Governor's prerogatives are the best known, because the public generally are in closer contact with the gubernatorial office. They know that His Excellency grants pardons and refuses them upon applications made in behalf of persons confined in the Penitentiary and in the county jails; that His Excellency also extends to the remitting of fines and of judgments upon forfeited recognizances; that he appoints Police Commissioners, a Board of Immigration, a Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Curators of the State University, Tobacco and Coal Oil Inspectors, an Insurance Commissioner, a Warden and physician of the Penitentiary, etc., but beyond these incidents there is no general information, even about the Governor's office. The most necessary adjunct of the Governor is who keeps the public record of every official act performed by the Governor, and issues all commissions and pardons, besides keeping a daily record of all public matters incident to the executive office. It may be remarked here that the offices of Governor and Secretary of State are singularly outside of relative distance at the Capitol of Missouri, as the former's office is in the extreme southwestern corner, while the latter's is in the extreme northwestern corner. This gives the messenger from the Governor's private secretary an opportunity to record about 500 laps a day, unnecessarily, and is otherwise a defect in the architecture or the arrangements of the building. The offices of the Secretary of State consist of a reception and business room, with a small private office and stationery-room attached. One half the immense basement is devoted to the reception of public documents, over which the Secretary has direct supervision. Whenever the Governor decides to appoint anybody his Private Secretary merely writes upon a piece of blank paper the words: "John Smith, as Police Commissioner of St. Louis, to serve from January, 1881, until January, 1884," and upon the outside of the paper the words "Issue commission." The order is then signed by the Governor and delivered by a messenger to the chief clerk of the Secretary of State, who indorses thereon the date of its receipt and such other information as is necessary to its filing. Then he delivers the order to the commission clerk, who proceeds to fill up a blank as directed. The commission is conveyed by messenger to the Governor, who attaches his signature to the same and immediately returns it to the Secretary of State, who in like manner attaches his signature and the State seal and then has it mailed to the fortunate party commissioned. This routine is strictly observed in the case of all similar public business. But these are not all the duties devolving upon the Secretary of State. That important official receives and passes upon all applications for certificates of corporate existence, issues commissions to all State, county and Congressional officers and is an ex-officio member of the State Board of Equalization and the Commissioners of Public Printing. Besides, it is his duty to receive and safely keep all bills, records and documents of the Legislature, furnishing certified copies thereof at a compensation fixed by law. During Rodman's time the fees of the Secretary of State were appropriated as the salary of that officer, thus yielding an income of about $10,000 a year, but the Constitution of 1875 fixed the salaries of State officers, except the Governor, at $3,000 a year, and turned all fees into the State treasury. This system prevents speculation and obtains a perfect system of transacting the public business.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE,

HIS LIFE.

Hon. Michael K. McGrath, the present Secretary of State, is one of the most remarkably successful politicians and likewise the most efficient officer that ever occupied so important a place. He was born September 29, 1833, in County Cork, Ireland, and was educated in the private and national schools of that country. In 1851 he crossed the Atlantic and became a clerk in a brewery at St. Johns, N. B., but remained only a few months, proceeding thence to Bangor, Maine, where he was engaged as a clerk and book keeper from 1851 to 1855. The next year he occupied a clerkship in New York city, but the western fever still possessed him and he arrived at St. Louis in 1857. That same year he gained employment as a clerk in the office of Recorder of Deeds, maintaining it until 1861, when he became Deputy Clerk of the Criminal Court. In the latter position he remained six years. He was admitted to the bar in 1860 and was the Democratic nominee for Circuit Attorney in 1866. During the years 1867-8-9 Mr. McGrath was Deputy Clerk of the United States Circuit and District Courts, and in 1869-70 was Clerk of the City Council. In 1870 he was elected Clerk of the Criminal Court, serving a term of four years. In 1874 he was elected Secretary of State, under Gov. Hardin, re-elected in 1876, under Gov. Phelps, and re-elected in 1880, under Gov. Crittenden. When he first assumed the office at Jefferson City he found the most careless systems had prevailed, but immediately set about the work of bringing order out of chaos. It was a herculean task, but Mr. McGrath's long experience as a clerk made him perfect master of the situation, and he finally brought such reforms and adopted such rules that to-day the office of Secretary of State of Missouri has no equal in this country in its capacity, uniformity and rapidity in the transaction of public business.

A PEN PICTURE.

Personally, Mr. McGrath is a curious compound of dyspepsia and generosity. Small of stature, and thin of physique, his broad shoulders give him the appearance of a large man. He has blue eyes, a full beard of black and brown, a high, thoughtful forehead and closely-sheared head. At all times and under all circumstances he speaks his mind freely concerning men and measures, cheerfully waiting for time to vindicate his position. In 1880, when a candidate for a third term, and his friends were requesting him to be more discreet and politic, he coolly announced himself as opposed to the candidacy of Thos. T. Crittenden, and openly fought that gentleman's nomination. And yet, from a convention that almost unanimously nominated Crittenden for Governor, Mr. McGrath received a third-term nomination for Secretary of State. The bitterness between the two extended so far that at the election each scratched the other's name from the State ticket. Mr. McGrath's popularity emanates from the modest and quiet manner in which he places everybody under obligations to him. He will cheerfully rise at two o'clock in the morning, proceed to his office through a snow-storm and issue a requisition or a warrant for some foreign officer who desires to catch the next train, and that without the slightest manifestation of impatience. The thousands of kindly deeds similar to these have caused his wonderful success. He has a large family to whom he is singularly devoted and in whose society he is always to be found. Mrs. McGrath rarely attends any public entertainment, either at the mansion or elsewhere, but his own house is almost continuously occupied by visiting friends. He is a devout Catholic, and participates in all the church festivals and services. His charity is boundless, and keeps him poor, but it is indiscriminate and unostentatious.

MAJ. A. S. VOGDES,

chief clerk of the Secretary of State, became Paymaster under Gov. Fletcher's administration, and first made his entrance at the capital immediately succeeding the war. Previously he had been clerk of the Circuit Court of Platte county. Maj. Vogdes spent his youthful days in this city, where he was one of a band of convivial spirits, among whom was Judge Charles F. Cady, who had a suite of rooms on Market street, near the river. The older inhabitants may possibly remember when this band of well-dressed young men made the night hideous with their songs and escapades. Only two of that famous old crowd remain—Vogdes and Cady. The Major is even more dyspeptic than Mr. McGrath, with this difference, that the chief clerk buries his venom in the choicest literature, while the secretary only reads the newspapers. Vogdes has a small figure, a soldierly bearing, wears a gray imperial, has large gray eyes and a scarcity of hair on his head. His temperament is excessively nervous, enabling him to transact business rapidly and with the greatest system. He has occupied his position for eleven consecutive years, and his experience and information are simply invaluable. He has a son-in-law in this city, in the person of Attorney Reynolds, and is a happy grandfather. Major Vogdes has such a swarthy complexion that he is frequently taken for a Spaniard. His manners are thoroughly pleasant, for he is singularly versed in etiquette, and is altogether a gentleman of the old school. He receives $2,000 a year.

SAMUEL ENGLETON,

the commission clerk, has an Hebraic face and is quite young. His first appointment was an accident, for he left the position of head-waiter at the Laclede Hotel, this city, and went to Jefferson City at a venture. Finding a temporary vacancy, he secured it, expecting only to remain three weeks, but is now serving his eighth year. He made himself a necessity. At all times he is bubbling over with humor, is a natural comedian, and his good nature often leads him to be utilized as an actor in local entertainments. His salary is $1,200 a year.

EUGENE WILKERSON,

the stationery clerk, is an attorney who was formerly connected with the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad. There are a number of minor clerkships, occupied by Wm. Reed, Miss Agnes Kelly and others.

Boy Inventors.

From the Western Trade.

Some of the most important inventions have been the work of boys. The invention of the valve motion to the steam engine was made by a mere boy. Newcome's engine was in a very incomplete condition from the fact that there was no way to open or close the valves except by means of levers operated by the hand. He set up a large engine at one of the mines, and a boy, Humphrey Porter, was hired to work these valve-levers. Although this was not hard work, yet it required his constant attention. As he was working the levers he saw that parts of the engine moved in the right direction, and at the same time he had to open or close the valves. He procured a strong cord and made one end fast to the proper part of the engine, and the other end to the valve-lever, and the boy then had the satisfaction of seeing the engine move with perfect regularity of motion. A short time after the foreman came around and saw the boy playing marbles at the door. Looking at the engine he saw the ingenuity of the boy, and also the advantage of so great an invention. The idea suggested by the boy's inventive genius was put in a practical form, and made the steam engine an automatic working machine.

The power-loom is the invention of a farmer's boy who had never seen or heard of such a thing. He whittled one out with his jack-knife, and when he had got it all done he showed it with great enthusiasm to his father, who at once kicked it all to pieces, saying he would have no boy about him who would spend his time on such foolish things. The boy was sent to a blacksmith to learn a trade, and his master took a lively interest in him. He made a loom of what was left of the one his father had broken up and showed it to his master. The blacksmith saw he had no common boy as an apprentice, and that the invention was a valuable one. He had a loom constructed under the supervision of the boy. It worked to their perfect satisfaction, and the blacksmith furnished the means to manufacture the looms, and the boy received half the profits. In about a year the blacksmith wrote to the boy's father that he should bring with him a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power-loom. You may be able to judge of the astonishment at the old home when his son was presented to him as the inventor, who told him that the loom was the same as the model that he had kicked to pieces but a year ago.

New York Newspapers.

Letter to Cincinnati Enquirer.

A public man, also a distinguished General, speaking to me yesterday about the newspaper press in New York City, said that while it was always admirable in its general narrations of the facts of the day, there was less competition in matters of news than a few years ago, and too much addiction to personal interests. "A certain portion of the press," said he, "represents individuls engaged in large speculative avocations. The other portion of the press, instead of letting that fact point its own morals, is constantly straining itself to work some injury to the private papers aforesaid, and hence the public are annoyed with charges and investigations, such as the Westbrook case, which, while they smirch a little, do no real good, and are as selfish in their origin as the journals they attack. It does not require that one newspaper points out in our time the weak spots in the next one. The people see the spot clearly enough, and reason accordingly; but they also see where the opposition press is consuming time and patience for private vengeance. A speculator is a fool to own a newspaper, as it can do him no good without injuring itself, and he is often telling his own secrets unwittingly because he happens to own a journal."

To Please Young Lovers.

From the New York Sun.

Two pretty novelties in finger rings to be found at the principal jewelry stores are very popular among young people in fashionable society. One has a round setting of small stones, the other three parallel bars studded with little gems, pretty combinations being preserved, such as turquoises and pearls, diamonds and rubies, or rubies and emeralds. The feature of their construction which charms the young folks is that, by a very ingenious device, each setting conceals a delicately enameled inscription which can be kept hidden or disclosed, as the wearer desires. By pressing an almost imperceptible point at one side under the round setting a little plate slides out to sight with its motto, "Love never dies." "Remember this true heart," "Forever thine," or something of that sort, and by turning the central bar in the other style three flat sides are exposed successively, each of which may bear an inscription.

"RAMBLERS."

Men and Women Who Spend the Nights Loafing in Parks and Public Places.

A Midnight Scene in the Hull of a Wiggins Ferry Wharfboat on the River Front.

The dockets of the different Police Courts during the past few weeks have daily contained cases where prisoners were charged with sleeping in the open air. These cases, known to the city ordinances as "ramblers," are made by raids during the night, at which curious sights are met with. When the night platoon in Central District left the assembly room at the Four Courts at 11 o'clock last night a POST-DISPATCH reporter accompanied the squad. The first duty of the night was the examination of property, after which Washington Park, Twelfth street and Clark avenue, was visited by the nearest officers. In the shade of one of the trees a bench was filled by half a dozen women clad in rags and holding an animated discussion, to which, however, a period was suddenly put on the approach of the visitors. The

SIX WOMEN WERE SQUATTED

on the bench and the grass plot near it, some in a reclining position and others idly sitting about. The first question asked was answered by Mary Granahan, who acted as spokeswoman for the group.

"Do you meet nightly here?"

"Yes," said Mary, "and used to, and will too, if the police don't interfere and run us in for staying here. But the Judge won't fine us anyhow and we are only locked up for a night. What harm do we do by sitting here during the night?"

"Do you sleep here?"

"No. That's why the police can't make the cases stick against us in the Police Court. After we were arrested we learned just as much about the law as the peeler himself knows." Notwithstanding Mary's conviction that they had the "bulge" on the police, this group hurriedly disbanded on the approach of the officer. "These old hags don't visit the park as much as they used to. They used to come into the park at one or two o'clock in the afternoon and remain here until two or three o'clock in the morning, talking all the time, and only leaving for a few minutes about dusk to skirmish for some food. They are just as sharp as the next one, and they manage their route in such a way as to absolutely prevent us from getting enough of facts to make a case against them. We can't swear that they have no means of support."

"What route do they take when they leave in the morning?"

"I don't know. I do know that they are shrewd enough to get off of the beat on which the park is situated, before they begin begging or visiting dramshops, which would give us a chance to make a case against them. I think they make the rounds of the groggeries as they open up in the morning and exchange an hour's work scrubbing and cleaning for a half-pint of whisky. At the restaurants and all night saloons, where lunches are laid during the night, they manage to get enough to keep body and soul together, with the assistance of a liberal supply of bad whisky."

AT MISSOURI PARK,

Thirteenth and St. Charles, a gang of men were found, but could not be detained long enough to have any lengthy conversation with them. They do not associate with the female tramps who frequent the parks. The men do not remain out all night like the women, usually bunking in some lumber yard removed from the sidewalk and the usual route of the policeman in making his nightly rounds.

The next place visited was the Court-house steps known as the O'Brien Flats. The officers were looking for two missing boys. Each sleeper was inpected, and as the officer passed him he was awakened from dreamland to the realities of the cold stone bed. Without waiting for any explanation the sleepy gentleman so rudely awakened from sweet dreams hurried off to some more sequestered spot where to spend the rest of the night. In view of the fact that the officers do not know the names of the lodgers met in this way and would have some difficulty in arousing them in the ordinary methods, they have dopted a plan that is less troublesome, more successful, but less pleasant to the sleeper. With his night club the officer whacks the sole of one of the sleeper's feet. This is a novel way of awakening a man, but to accompany an officer and see with what ease he can in this way dispose of a "gang of sleepers" is convincing proof of its worth. The river front was next visited. This is a famous locality for tramps and sleepers. Under the guidance of the private watchman, the levee was traversed from the foot of Chouteau avenue to the bridge. Each skid-pile and tarpaulin was examined and found to contain lodgers of all ages and classes. Where freight was deposited some fellow less fond of viewing the heavens would be found stowed away under an improvised tent from the extension of the tarpaulin. These were routed out without ceremony. As one sleepy tramp was leaving his rest near the foot of Olive street he said: "It's queer there ain't a place in the city where a man without money can sleep during the night. What harm do we do a pile of old skids by sleeping on them? Now to-night I was around at every place and couldn't find a place to drop, though I was tired. I was at the rolling mill at the foot of Miller street, but I couldn't get a place there. The police won't let you at the flats." The Court-house was meant by the speaker. After the sleepers were ousted a new lodging-place was pointed out to the reporter by one of the private watchmen, who walked aboard the ferry-wharf at the foot of Almond street and handed the scribe down a hatchway to the hold, where everything was dark as night. The wharf pitched from side to side, creaking and groaning, while the swashing of the current as it struck the bow was monotonous and dreary. The bilge water which had seeped through the calkings lay in the bottom of the hold under a platform through which the splashing could be heard in the stillness. The place was uncomfortably close and fearfully quiet. The guide followed the first arrival into the hold, throwing the light about the dreary place by holding his lantern above his head. Stretched on boards near the bow of the wharfboat lay two or three men sound asleep and perfectly oblivious of the presence of the intruders, who did not awaken them for a few moments. The place looked more like the interior of a graveyard vault or a mining tunnel than anything else, while the snores of one of the sleepers, alternating with the creaking of the wharf, did not make the sounds and surroundings any more pleasant. The sleeping beauties were aroused from their slumbers and told that the company would not allow them to sleep there. Without a word they scampered up the opening, as they had often done before, and wandered idly up the inclined plane of the Levee to seek quarters in the center of the city.

A Queer Surgical Case.

From the London Life.

The celebrated Vienna surgeon, Prof. Billroth, has at present in his hospital a case which will shortly create some sensation in the medical world. One of his patients has been in the habit for the last six years of "rinsing" his stomach daily. This manipulation, one of the wonders of modern therapeutics, consists in inserting a tube into the stomach, through the gullet, and pouring lukewarm or medicated water through the tube, by means of a funnel, till the stomach is full. Then, by simply lowering the end of the tube to the waist, a siphon is formed, and the stomach is emptied. The patients who undergo this operation suffer mostly from chronic catarrh of the digestive organs. The process is so simple that they soon learn to perform it unaided, and this was the case with the above-mentioned patient. Unfortunately for him, he had not thought it necessary or did not possess the means of purchasing the new tube, but contented himself with mending, and patching, and tying defective parts with thread. The inevitable took place. A portion of the tube, measuring eight inches at least, remained in his stomach, as he is now awaiting Prof. Billroth's decision as to the best means of treatment. The skillful surgeon is still hesitating between the two courses open to him; he must either attempt to extract the intruder through the œsophagus, with the help of gastroscopy, or he must resort to gastronomy. Meanwhile the patient enjoys a good appetite.

PENNSYLVANIA SAVAGES.

The Wretched End of an Old Hag—A Drunken Funeral.

Equinunk (Pa.) Letter to Philadelphia Times.

Three hunters from the western part of Sullivan county, New York, just across the Delaware River from here, report the finding of the body of a woman who has been missing from her home at Mongaup Valley for several months. Her death was a most horribly tragic one and a fitting end to a strange life. Her name was Margaret Conkling, and she was known throughout the country as "Old Mag the hag." She was one of a large family of half-savage people known as the De Groatses, the Hinkses, the Henions and the Conklings. This family is said to number about 350 men, women and children, than whom a more degraded lot of people it would be hard to find in the United States. They dwell in small caves and cabins in the wooded hills of Sullivan county and on the semi-cultivated slopes of Orange county. Their living is made principally by stealing, hunting and fishing with nets in forbidden streams. Some few of them are expert weavers of willow baskets, which they carry to the near-by towns and sell. These pariahs frequently visited Pennsylvania with loads of baskets, which they sold to the farmers and country merchants at the cross-roads stores. The cash proceeds of these sales were invariably turned into whisky and tobacco, and the women were as dissipated and abandoned to vice as the men. They also planned robberies and depredations of all kinds, and every basket-selling tour is sure to be followed by a raid upon barns, chicken-coops and cellars. The people are familiar with every inch of ground in the Delaware Valley, and they can easily hide themselves in the mountains and manage to escape the officers of the law.

The Conklings are of Indian descent—the Seneca breed, they claim—and they bear all the facial marks of their ancestors, while their habits are even more indecent and less cleanly than those of their savage ancestors. They inter-marry exclusively and no divorce is necessary to separate man and wife if either party desires such a separation. The result of this defiance of the laws of physiology are evident in the forms of their children. Many of them are idiots, some are born without ears, some without limbs, and there is one singular being, it is said, in a lonely hut near a lake on the western edge of Sullivan county, that would be more of an acquisition to Barnum's show than "Jumbo" was. This being has neither nose, eyes, nor ears, and only two teeth can be found in its head, while its feet are clubbed and its hands resemble the fins of a big fish more than human members. Yet this singular creature lives and seems to enjoy life. A Monticello hunter, David Boyle, who often goes to that part of the county fishing, has seen this "what-is-it" eat raw fish, raw potatoes, and even raw skunk-meat with evident relish. The mother of this monstrosity is a woman six feet seven inches in height, and her husband is her own uncle. The mother has quite a decided moustache and beard, while the father is but three feet eight inches high, hare-lipped and a hunchback dwarf.

THE QUEEN OF THE GANG.

Such is the race or family to which "Old Mag, the hag," belonged, and among the tribe of savages she was regarded as a sort of a queen, and treated with as much deference as gypsies pay to their sovereign. She was reputed to have been the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, and was in consequence believed to be endowed with the magic power of curing all sorts of diseases and bone fractures. She was also a fortune teller of great skill. Her appearance was very singular. She was nearly six feet nine inches in height, her skin was saffron yellow, her hair long, coarse, and black as a raven's wing, and her chin was covered with a beard at least three inches in length. She adopted a regular Indian costume, and lived alone in her small cabin on the shore of Big Pond, just on the edge of the great cranberry marshes of Sullivan county. Her house was constantly besieged by city people from New York and Philadelphia who were summering in Sullivan and who came to have the future revealed to them by this wonderful fortune-teller. She made lots of money and knew how to save it. She never spent a cent, except for liquor, and one of her peculiarities was that she would never allow any human being to sleep in her cabin, not even one of her own kindred, and those of the "tribe" who visited her always went prepared to sleep out of doors. There was annually a gathering of the whole family and these convocations were the wildest orgies imaginable and more than one member of the great family has been missing after a long debauches in some lonely cabin or cave in the rocks.

"Old Mag" was last seen alive several months ago, and was then as frisky as ever and as full of whisky as usual. One or two weeks after that one of the Hinkses remarked in the county post-office near where Mag lived, "Mag hain't t' hum no more, an' I shudn't wonder ef she was dead." One of the bystanders afterwards made a trip to her cabin and found it deserted. On the earthern floor in one corner of the room lay a half bushel of walnuts and chestnuts, a smoked ham and a string of red peppers, while near at hand hung the dead and decayed body of a fox with the skin still on. No signs of "Old Mag" were to be found anywhere and search was made everywhere, but without success.

OLD MAG'S DEATH.

Some time afterward the three hunters first referred to were chasing a bear through a swamp about two miles from the old cabin where "Mag" formerly lived. One of the hunters slipped on what he supposed at first to be a round stone, but which proved to be a human skull still covered with patches of bloody skin and hair. At once it was surmised that the skull was that of old "Mag," the peculiar shape of her head corresponding to the shape of the skull. They then set to work to find the remainder of the body, when suddenly their dog commenced barking furiously under a chestnut tree on the hillside. Running to the spot they discovered that the dog had scented a partly-decayed human body. It required but a brief examination to convince them that the remains of "Old Mag, the hag," lay before them. She had climbed the tree to shake down some nuts, probably. When near the top the limb upon which she was standing broke and she fell a distance of thirty feet. A large jagged stump under the tree caught her body as she fell, and one large splinter of it was thrust clear through her body, impaling her. Her death must have been instantaneous. A bear or some other carnivorous animal had gnawed away her feet and hand, which hung nearly to the ground, and it was undoubtedly a bear that had torn her head from the body and carried it into the swamp.

Among the De Groatses, Hinkses and Hinions the news soon spread, and they gathered in full force to attend Mag's funeral and dispose of the body, which had been conveyed to the cabin. It was on a Saturday afternoon that at least two hundred of these half-savage men and women assembled at old Mag's cabin and held a wake over the mangled body. They indulged in drunkenness and wild orgies for two whole days, and finally, on the Monday following, at midnight, they departed, after having set fire to and totally destroyed the cabin. What became of the old woman's body is more than any one can tell, for it is one of the customs of the Conkling tribe to leave no trace of the grave of one of their members.

UPON THE HILL.

We walked on the hill between the lights,
  When silence had fallen on the land
And cast a shadow o'er the lake:
  We wandered together hand in hand,
Only the stars were watching us—
  Only the stars and the brooding birds—
For the pasture lands were silent too,
  From the lazy feet of the browsing herds.

We watched together the shadows deep,
  The marsh-fires quiver with tongues of flame;
We watched the shroud the darkness made
  O'er the placid lake, like a cloak of shame.
The night-hawk called to his skimming mate,
  The pause was heard by the lowing kine:
A sigh fell from the tender heart
  Of the woman whose hand lay locked in mine.

A sigh that the night should fall so soon
  To hide the beauty of land and sky.
But there on the hill no darkness came,
  The soft west wind stole murmuring by.
We walked and dreamed there on the hill:
  Only the stars heard our whispered words,
And they danced and sang with songs of trust.
  Oh, pale, blue stars and the nesting birds!

A PITTSBURG telegram of Thursday says: By some misunderstanding the Tom Rees brought the Thompson Dean on up here instead of dropping her at Freedom, and she towed her back to that point. The hull of the new Will S. Hays is being built at Freedom, and it is the intention to transfer the cabin of the Dean on to the new hull there. Mr. James A Henderson is back from St. Louis.

THE Quincy Herald says: About one hundred people assembled at the wharf yesterday to witness the arrival of the Gem City from Keokuk. The boat had a cabin full of passengers, and lay here two hours receiving and discharging freight. Capt. Abe Hutchinson, General Superintendent of the St. Louis and St. Paul Line, was on board on his way to St. Louis. He stated that he had been superintending the repairs of all the boats in the line for the purpose of placing them in first-class condition for the rush of travel that is expected. He laid the Gem City up two days last week and brought her out as fine as when new. She will enter the St. Paul trade about the 15th. Her cabin is as fine as paint and decorative art can make it. On her last trip up the Gem City took what is called in river phrase the "angel cake" for beating all previous runs between St. Louis and Alton. She made the run to that point one second faster than the Altona, whose time some river men thought never could be beaten. Capt. Hutchison stated that the company had made arrangements for a large St. Paul trade during the hot season. All the boats are fast and offer fine accommodations. The Gem City will doubtless carry off the honors.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

State of Missouri, City of St. Louis—ss.
In the Circuit Court, City of St. Louis,
April Term, 1882.
Thursday, April 27, 1882.
Ellen Louisa Vaughn
vs.
Joseph Edward Vaughn.

It appearing from the petition of the plaintiff herein, duly verified by affidavit, that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Missouri, therefore, on motion of said plaintiff, by her attorney,

It is ordered that said defendant be notified that a civil action has been commenced against him, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony existing between the plaintiff and defendant, on the ground that the defendant has absented himself from plaintiff without reasonable cause, for the space of one year, or more, prior to the filing of said petition, and has, since October 18, 1880, failed to provide for and support the plaintiff and the two children of said plaintiff and defendant, and that said plaintiff may have the further order of the court giving her the custody of her said minor children and the restoration of her maiden name.

And unless he appear at the term of this court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis, on the first Monday of October next, and on or before the third day thereof answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against him as confessed.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.

A true copy from the record.

Witness my hand and seal of the Circuit Court City of St. Louis, this 28th day of April, 1882.

{SEAL} 17H CHAS. F. VOGEL,
Clerk.
